ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Much love and appreciation to all of my family members, relatives, close friends and loyal supporters of all of my books and talk radio podcast programs. Special acknowledgement always goes to those in my close inner circle of friends, which includes among others, my older brother, Stephen C. Currie

I have a lot of respect for a lot of fellow experts who work in the area of dating & relationships, sex, seduction, erotica, and other related genres, many who I have interviewed on my talk radio podcast programs. A few would include: Dr. Veronica Anderson, Dr. Susan Block, Samantha Brett, April D. Carter, Anthony & Melanie Clark, Dr. Helen Fisher, Dr. Yvonne K. Fulbright, Robert Greene, Dr. Debby Herbenick, Twanna Hines, Stefany Jones, Alexandra Katehakis, Marni Kinrys, Alex Lasarev, Dr. Carole Lieberman, Lucia, Nina Hartley, Dr. Bat Sheva Marcus, Mr. Marcus, Tariq Nasheed, Tammy Nelson, Dr. Jessica O'Reilly, Lorna Clarke Osunsanmi, Steve Penner, Dr. Carol Queen, Dr. Rachael Ross, Candida Royalle, Yolanda Shoshana, Ryeal Simms, Don Suave, Shanel Cooper-Sykes, Dr. Natasha Janina Valdez, Chrystal West, and Sheri Winston.

Special shout outs to Sam Harvey in London, Rico a.k.a Your Royal Flyness, and Chicago Photographer Carlos Alvarez. Also, much props and respect to the late, great adult film actor John Leslie, as well as Anthony Spinelli, Anthony Spinelli, Jr., Bernardo Bertolucci, Tinto Brass, and Zalman King. These men have inspired me and continue to do so. Last but not least, I have much love and respect for the women who allowed me to share one or more episodes of erotic enjoyment and orgasmic pleasure with them, and also the many women who I have engaged in lengthy, candid, erotically uninhibited conversations with. I have probably learned more about women's sensuality during most of my episodes of hot, kinky phone sex with women than I have during many of my episodes of enjoyable (and not-so-enjoyable) bedroom sex. Thank you.

Introduction

Sad to say, very few men will purchase a self-help book, particularly one about love, long-term romantic relationships, or marriage. Women are overwhelmingly the primary buyers of self-help books from the dating and relationships genre. When it comes to discussions about conversing with and interacting with women, men primarily care about sex.

Just about all single heterosexual men want to know about one or more of these three things: 1) how to be better at sex (e.g., how to maintain an erection for a longer period of time before orgasm, how to cause a woman to 'squirt' or experience more orgasms, etc.); 2) how to improve the quality or quantity of their female sex partners; and 3) how to get a woman aroused and in their bed without investing too much time or too much money. If a book offers advice related to one of these three areas, there is a good chance that a man will pick it up.

This book primarily offers advice related to issue #3, and to a lesser extent, issue #2. I believe there are more than enough books on the market currently that emphasize issue #1, so I do not really touch on that area at all.

As a reader, the books that inspire me the most and that I tend to learn the most from are those that 1) ask the reader a really good question (or series of questions), and 2) proceed to provide knowledge, wisdom, well thought out logic and valid opinions, and even relevant data and statistics, that is supported by documented research that attempts to thoroughly answer that question (or questions) to the best of the author's ability.

As an aspiring screenwriter and filmmaker living in Los Angeles, I would evaluate the vast majority of my favorite films with those criteria in mind. "What primary question is this film posing? And what answers to that question is this film providing to viewers?"

Take the 1987 film, Fatal Attraction starring Academy Award winning actor Michael Douglas and Emmy Award winning actress Glenn Close. The question this movie asked its audience, and in particular the male audience, is this:

"What are some of the unforeseen repercussions and potential consequences of having an adulterous weekend affair with someone who you know very little, if anything about?"

Just about every scene and major plot point in that film was either directly or indirectly related to providing a visual answer to that question.

As a writer, this is the format I use. Ask a compelling question, and then answer it in the most entertaining, enlightening and intellectually thorough manner as possible.

If you have read my previous paperbacks, you'll see that in each book I posed one central question to my readers, and then I used each individual chapter in each book to provide my brand of knowledge, wisdom, philosophies and assertions that attempted to answer that central question.

Central Question #1:

"How does the fear of being rejected by a woman and the fear of being criticized or disliked by a woman inhibit the ability of a single heterosexual man to approach a woman of interest, initiate a conversation with her, and ultimately express his romantic or sexual desires, interests and intentions?"

The answer: Mode One: Let the Women Know What You're REALLY Thinking (the title of my first paperback)

Central Question #2:

"Alan, how does communicating with members of the opposite sex in a 'Mode One' manner help you quickly and effectively identify or prevent 'manipulative head games?' How can I distinguish when a man or woman sincerely shares the same romantic or sexual desires, interests and intentions that I have, versus a man or woman who is really intending to deceive me, mislead me, manipulate me, and toy with my emotions?"

The answer: Upfront and Straightforward: Let the Manipulative Game Players Know What You're REALLY Thinking (the title of my second paperback)

I do not possess a Ph.D. in counseling or clinical psychology, marriage therapy, sex therapy, or any other related field. I have earned my credibility as an author and dating coach simply by having a history of offering advice to readers and clients that helped them solve their problems and ultimately improve their love life, sex life, and overall social life.

Arguably my best advice to male clients has been in the areas of 1) helping single heterosexual men overcome their fear of being rejected so that they will soon start approaching more women of interest and initiate a conversation with them, and 2) helping these same men overcome their fear of being criticized by women or their fear of receiving negative reactions from women so that they will soon express their romantic and sexual desires, interests and intentions to women of interest in a more self-assured, upfront, forthright manner.

Even though I am not a licensed psychologist or therapist, I have many clients in various countries who pay me by the hour for advice and consultations. I receive positive testimonials full of appreciation and gratitude on a monthly, if not weekly basis.

Some people in society say that “sex is a very controversial subject, and always will be.” I half-agree, and half-disagree.

More specifically, it is kinky sex and promiscuous sex that typically provokes strong opinions from many. There is no real controversy regarding prudish, monogamous-minded John Doe having sex at 10:00 PM in the master bedroom with his prudish, monogamous-minded wife Mary Ann Doe.

Very few men and women want their sexual preferences, sexual habits, and sexual activities to become public knowledge when they are engaging in sex that they know will be perceived as kinky or polyamorous and promiscuous.

Personally, I have no issue with men and women engaging in any form of sex they choose, as long as it is mutually consensual sexual activity, and the man and woman involved are being upfront and straightforwardly honest with each other about their long-term desires, interests and intentions.

My attitude is, once you are 18 years of age, you can do whatever you choose to sexually as long as you are totally aware of all of the potential emotional, social and health-related consequences and repercussions that may accompany your choices and behavior.

Many men and women in American society are naturally hypocritical, duplicitous, self-righteous and judgmental when it comes to issues related to sex. Remind yourself of this on a regular basis, otherwise you will eventually become agitated.

I have been criticized, many times very harshly, by some conservative and deeply religious types for not discouraging single heterosexual men from engaging in premarital sex or pursuing women for short-term non-monogamous sex.

I am not a minister or a preacher. I feel I have done my part by encouraging men to avoid being dishonest with women, and to avoid engaging in manipulative ‘head games’ with women.

I have said it before, and I will say it (repeatedly) again: If you are a man, and you know you just want short-term non-monogamous (casual) sex with a woman, just TELL WOMEN THAT FROM THE GET-GO. This allows the woman to make her own choice and decide whether or not to sleep with you.

As I discussed in my two previous paperbacks, Mode One and Upfront and Straightforward, anytime you are dishonest or misleading about your interest … or your lack of interest … in some form of romantic or sexual relationship, you are engaging in manipulative 'head games.'

Why are there so many manipulative 'head games' employed by both men and women related to dating and relationships and the pursuit of sexual companionship?

Here is a recap of the major games that members of both genders tend to engage in:

Men's primary manipulative 'head games':

- Men who approach women, and give them the misleading impression that they want a sexual relationship that is both long-term and monogamous, when in reality, these men want a sexual relationship that is short-term or non-monogamous.

- Men who approach women, and give them the misleading impression that they are only interested in a platonic friendship, when they know deep-down they are interested in some form of romantic or sexual companionship.

- Men who offer women financial and non-financial "favors" under the guise of being 'generous' and 'helpful,' when in reality, they are expecting the women they are helping out to 'reward' them with sex.

- Men who give their spouses or long-term romantic companions the misleading impression that they are "in love" and being monogamous to their partner, when in actuality, they are being unfaithful and having sex with "women on the side."

Women's primary manipulative 'head games':

- Women who interact with men under the guise of being genuinely interested in them romantically or sexually, when in reality, they simply want flattering attention, entertaining social companionship, financial and non-financial favors, or a dependable, empathetic listening ear when they are frustrated or bored.

- Women who 'cock tease' men on a regular or semi-regular basis for their own egotistical satisfaction.

- Women who date and marry men primarily for the man's level of social status, level of education, career success, or wealth, but in reality, they have no real romantic feelings for these men or no real sexual attraction for these men, and ultimately, they end up being unfaithful to these men and having sex with "men on the side."

- Women who pretend to be genuinely interested in a casual sex relationship with a man, when in reality, they really want a relationship that is long-term, emotionally profound, and monogamous.

Some in society say, "Most unwanted pregnancies come from short-term non-monogamous (casual) sex." Bullshit. Statistics do not back that up. Most of the women I have met who had babies out of wedlock got pregnant while they were in a long-term monogamous "boyfriend-girlfriend" relationship.

Some in society say, "Sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) are more frequently passed around because of casual sex." Again, I say bullshit. Men and women who fail to practice safe sex and are sexually irresponsible engage in long-term monogamous relationships just as much, if not more, than they do short-term non-monogamous (casual) sex.

Adult film stars are very promiscuous, and they also have some of the lowest rates of STDs of any man or woman in American society (most Adult Film actors and actresses actually get tested for HIV an average of once per month, and they get tested for other STDs an average of once every 2-3 months).

Do your research people. There are a lot more myths and unsubstantiated criticisms and assertions against the concept of casual sex than there are truth, facts, and valid statements.

Here are some of the questions and issues I plan to address in my third paperback:

What are the symptoms of the Madonna / Whore Complex, and how does it affect a man's attitude and behavior toward women?

What types of women are most receptive to invitations to indulge in casual sex? What type of women will typically have the most adverse reactions to invitations to engage in short-term or non-monogamous sex?

Why are some women totally turned off by sexually provocative conversations and erotic dirty talk, while other women will "pretend" as though they are turned off and offended by sex talk, but in reality, are really turned on by erotically explicit language and sexually provocative conversations?

How can a man identify the "genuine prudes" from the "disingenuous / fake prudes?" Why do women 'pretend' to be 'prudish' when they are really open-minded, free-spirited, and erotically uninhibited? Why do some women 'pretend' to be only interested in long-term monogamous sex when in reality they have and will indulge in short-term non-monogamous sex?

What is "seduction?" When do you really need to truly 'seduce' a woman? When can you have sex with a woman without needing to 'seduce' her?

How important is your physical appearance in turning women on? How important is your degree of career success or wealth? How important is your sense of humor? What are the primary male attributes you need to possess in order to effectively attract and seduce women into having sex with you?

What is Aural Sex? How can you get a woman sexually aroused simply by using certain words, your voice, and your overall conversational skills?

These are just some of the questions I will address in this book. Hopefully, after reading through it, you will have some of the answers and advice you need to improve your ability to verbally seduce those women who you are most interested in having sex with.

I accept the fact that many of my beliefs, ideas, and philosophies will never be accepted as 'mainstream' or 'All-American' ideals and values. The concept of all single, heterosexual men exhibiting Mode One Behavior toward women of interest with the primary objective being casual sex severely challenges modern society's status quo.

In fact, while most men and women will say they want others to be honest, the ironic thing is, few can take it. Quick example: I hear so many women say, "I hate men who are liars. Why do men play so many head games?" but when asked about the idea of men exhibiting Mode One Behavior toward them, and letting them know upfront and straightforwardly that all a man wants is short-term non-monogamous sex, many of the women said, "Well, if all they want is a one-night stand or weekend fling, I would rather they keep their desires to themselves."

That said, men can have equally 'subjective' ideas of what honesty means – most people, men and women would rather hear pleasant, palatable lies than real, raw, straightforward truth. You say you want truth. Do you really?

Let me give you some truth: A young man I know left the following comment on the popular social networking site, Facebook: "97.5% of the women I meet, I just want to fuck. One time, two times, three times, maybe five times. Less than 3% of the women I meet do I even remotely think about them becoming my serious girlfriend or potential wife. Men … what is your percentage?"

Only a handful of men offered a written 'co-sign', probably for fear of being attacked by this man's female Facebook friends, but over 50 men clicked on his 'like' button, including Yours Truly. I believe this sentiment is shared by many women as well.

The truth is this: most men, especially attractive, popular 'alpha male' types, would highly prefer to only interact with women sexually in a short-term or non-monogamous manner. There are very few women that these types of men would want to be sexually monogamous with indefinitely.

If you put a single heterosexual man in a room with one-hundred beautiful, sexy women, and asked him, "How many of these women would you have sex with ONE TIME?" That man would probably say, "95-100 of them." If you asked him how many of those 100 women in that room would he have sex with 2-3 times, he would probably respond, "85-95 of them." If you continued with your questioning, and asked that same man, "how many of these women would you have sex with monogamously for the next 5, 10, 15+ years?" that man's response would probably be, "2 or 3 of them. 4-5 of them tops."

At the risk of generalizing my gender, the vast majority of single heterosexual men with high libidos would exchange orgasms literally with each and every attractive woman they met, if given the opportunity, at least one, two, or three times.

Does that mean that these types of men should be branded as "pigs" for just wanting to fuck women 1-3 times instead of wanting to be involved with them romantically and monogamously for an indefinite period of time? No. Men are who they are. Women are who they are.

If you are a woman reading this, and you do not want a man to 'use you just for sex,' remember: you have a choice. Women just about always maintain the final decision when it comes to sex, so you can keep your legs closed until you are engaged, married, or at least, living in the same house or apartment as your long-time lover if you so choose. Women, when involved in a mature, consensual adult relationship of any kind with men, are the ultimate gatekeepers of sex.

Many women feel they have to pretend to be content with casual sex, when they really want a long-term, emotionally profound, and monogamous sexual relationship that will lead to marriage. Please, stop pretending. You will only set yourself up for a lifetime of hurt, frustration and heartbreak. Always be honest with yourself, and your potential lover, about your long-term desires, interests, intentions and expectations.

Men who 'just want to fuck,' ideally, should be hooking up with women who 'just want to fuck' too. And the men who want something more long-term and emotionally profound should be hooking up with the women who want the same thing. Sounds very easy, right? We all know, realistically, that life does not pan out this way, because unfortunately, members of both genders love to play head games.

If you have read my previous books, then you know that I keep it real. I did not write this book to teach men how to play head games with women, and mislead women. If you did not read my first paperback, Mode One: Let the Women Know What You're REALLY Thinking, then stop reading this book right now until you purchase and read Mode One. While you're at it, pick up my second paperback, Upfront and Straightforward: Let the Manipulative Game Players Know

What You're REALLY Thinking. Ideally, you should have read both of those books before sitting down to read this one.

If you are looking for advice that is representative of pleasant, conventional "fluff talk" that is easy on the eyes and the ears, I am not the author for you. I tend to write a lot of truths and assertions that leave a lot of men and women riled up, and ready to engage me in hours and hours and days and days of heated debates.

The primary criticism I receive from other men is that you cannot seduce high quality 'hot' women by being upfront and straightforward. Many men feel they will be seen as a 'horny creep,' and end up slapped and cursed out by women. But, in fact, while a few women have found my provocative, straight-to-the-point interpersonal communication style to be unconventional and even socially inappropriate, I can honestly say that since my early 20s, I have never been slapped or physically assaulted by a woman as a result of utilizing Mode One Behavior. Knock on wood.

As far as criticisms from women, many of them simply do not like the idea of "pick up artists" trying to 'trick' them into having (casual) sex. They find such techniques and tactics manipulative and unethical. And you know what? I agree with them. I have never considered myself a "pick up artist," and never will.

One last story before we get started: a guy left me a comment on a message board saying, "Alan, with all due respect, I just want to get laid. I don't care if that means lying to women, making them think I am in love with them, or just blatantly manipulating their emotions … I am going to do whatever it takes to get laid." At some point in the future, I wouldn't be surprised to read about that same guy getting stabbed in the head by some hurt, crazy woman who is full of anger, frustration and bitterness. Heaven has no rage like love turned to hatred, nor hell a fury like a woman scorned.

My advice in a nutshell: men need to be honest when they want nothing more than just a pleasurable fuck and satisfying orgasm, and women need to be honest when they want something more than just a pleasurable fuck and satisfying orgasm(s). The failure to adhere to this very simple piece of advice is the primary root and basis for all of the 'head games' between men and women.

When you are dishonest, disingenuous, misleading or manipulative toward getting someone in bed, you are usually left with all sorts of unnecessary "drama" and ill feelings on both sides. Trust me on this. If you are upfront and straightforwardly honest about your long-term sexual desires, interests and intentions, neither you or the other person will be left with any feelings of regret, shame or animosity.

If you are only after some conventional, mainstream, "feel-good" advice that is easy on the eyes and ears, then I might not be the author for you. But if you read on, I can assure you that my bold, no-nonsense approach will not leave you complacent - a lot of men and women will spend hours, or even days on heated debates with me on the truths I raise. While I have 'haters' and critics in over 15 different countries across the world, I also have fans and supporters - people who do want to speak, and hear, the truth about ourselves.

Enjoy the book. Email me with questions: feedback@modeone.net

Preface: Do You Suffer from the Madonna / Whore Complex?

In addition to being a book author, I am the host of two talk radio podcast programs: Upfront & Straightforward with Alan Roger Currie and The Erotic Conversationalist.

If there is one issue that repeatedly comes up on my two shows, it is the psychological concept developed by the legendary psychologist Dr. Sigmund Freud, known as the Madonna / Whore Complex

When a man suffers from the Madonna / Whore Complex, he tends to perceive the sexuality of all women in two diametrically opposed categories:

- Conservative, sexually self-controlled, prudish, chaste, monogamous-minded "good girls"

- Wild, free-spirited, horny, kinky, lustful, promiscuous "whores" and adulterous "sluts."

The reality is, only a small percentage of women fall neatly into these two categories. If I were to evaluate all women's sensuality and degree of eroticism on a scale from "1" to "5," with the 'prudish good girls' being a '5,' and the 'kinky, promiscuous whores' and 'adulterous sluts' being a "1," the vast majority of women in society are 2s, 3s and 4s.

What would be my personal description of a "1," a "2," a "3," a "4," and a "5?" A lot of this will be highly subjective on my part, but here we go:

"5" – This is a woman who never, ever engages in short-term or non-monogamous sex. This woman will only have sex with a man who is her husband, fiancé, or long-time, monogamous, live-in lover and romantic companion.

"4" – This is a woman who generally prefers to only have sex with a man within the context of a long-term monogamous relationship, but not necessarily marriage. A woman who is a genuine 4 highly prefers "boyfriend-girlfriend" type relationships where some sort of emotional bond and connection is present. If and when this woman does decide to engage in episodes of short-term or non-monogamous sex intentionally, there is a 99% chance that she is going to regret it sometime later on.

"3" – This is a woman who highly prefers long-term monogamous sexual companionship, but this woman will also indulge in occasional episodes of short-term and/or non-monogamous (casual) sex, if you say the right thing at the right time on the right day, or if you are generally 'her type,' and your verbal seduction skills are above-average. This woman is extremely selective about choosing her casual sex partners.

"2" – This is a woman who will acknowledge that she does not have a problem engaging in casual sex with men who she feels she has an above-average degree of sexual chemistry with. She will even occasionally indulge in kinky acts such as a ménage-a-trois, other forms of group sex, exhibitionistic sex or voyeuristic sex. Most women who are 2s tend to be duplicitous about their sexuality, and want others to perceive them as conservative, prudish, and monogamous.

"1" – This woman is very kinky and promiscuous, and will have sex with just about any guy who flirts with her, any guy who is her 'physical type,' or any guy of interest who offers to 'wine and dine' and perform financial favors for her.

I'm going to give you a quick course in "Manipulative Head Games 101" as it relates to the desire for casual sex:

1) Many men want to have casual sex, but they do not want to have casual sex with women who they perceive as "1s" and "2s." Those are the women who most egotistical men tend to categorize as an "easy lay," or worse, a 'whore' or a 'slut.'

Men, and in particular egotistical men, want to pursue women who they perceive as a 'challenge'; Therefore, they pursue the women who they perceive as 4s and 5s, with their bare minimum standard being women who are 3s.

2) Women are not stupid (well, most are not). The vast majority of women who are 1s and 2s are not going to publicly present themselves as an 'easy lay' or a 'slut.' Duh. These women want to be perceived as a worthwhile challenge for a man as well. So what do they do? Women who are 1s sometimes purposely give men a hard time, and women who are 2s maintain the duplicitous, disingenuous façade of being prudish and sexually conservative in their habits.

(If you have read Chapter Six in Mode One, I introduced you to the terms, Wholesome Pretenders and Erotic Hypocrites. Without getting bogged down with lengthy definitions again, a Wholesome Pretender is a woman who is basically a "1" or a "2," but loves to present herself to men as a "3," a "4" or a "5." Same with an Erotic Hypocrite, only an Erotic Hypocrite is much more materialistic and social status-oriented than a Wholesome Pretender).

As I said in that chapter in Mode One, I do not blame most women for exhibiting sexually duplicitous behavior. Men are far too judgmental towards women's sexuality than they should be.

My attitude is this: Either you want to have sex with a woman, or you do not. It is that simple. Technically, it should not even matter if a woman is a 1, 2, or 3, if your interest is specifically casual sex. Again, the men who go after 4s and 5s are typically men with very huge egos.

I was invited to speak at a men's attraction and seduction conference that was held in London, England in November 2010. On the second day of the two-day conference, a well-known "pick up artist" (or DayGamer as he would be referred to) and I had a mildly contentious exchange.

Why? Because he tried to suggest that Mode One Behavior (i.e., letting your sexual desires and interests be known to a woman in a confident, upfront, straightforwardly honest manner) was ineffective. Particularly toward women who are 3s, 4s and 5s. He went on to say that the only women that Mode One would work on would be 1s and 2s, and he considers women like that "beneath his standards."

Actually, this guy was half-right – and half full of judgmental bullshit. Mode One will not work on a woman who is a true 5. A woman who is a true 5 is not at all interested in engaging in short-term or non-monogamous sex. She is only interested in long-term and monogamous sex, preferably with her spouse.

Same generally applies to a woman who is a true 4. The only way you are really going to get a true 4 or true 5 to have casual sex with you is if you essentially "trick" them into having (casual) sex with you using manipulative tactics, which is essentially what most "pick up artists" (PUAs) teach you to do. I am not in any way, shape or form in favor of trying to 'trick' a woman into having sex with me. That is unethical and wrong.

For him to turn his nose down on women who are 1s, 2s and 3s is crazy and extremely judgmental in my book. If a man's primary interest is a long-term monogamous relationship, I could halfway understand why he might turn his nose down on a woman who is a 1 or a 2, but for casual sex?

My question is, do you want a pleasurable orgasm … or do you want an egotistical conquest? I want the former. I grew out of the "conquest" stage by the time I was in my early-to-mid 20s. I do not have sex with women for the primary purpose of bragging to my male friends that I 'banged a hot woman.'

If men stopped being so damn egotistical and judgmental, more women would be upfront and genuine with men about where they are coming from sexually (I'll admit: sometimes, members of my own gender get on my last, fucking nerve).

So again, because of men's bullshit philosophies and attitudes like this PUA / DayGamer in London, you now have a lot of 1s and 2s pretending to be 3s, 4s and 5s, instead of having all women be genuine 1s, 2s, 3s, 4s and 5s. Luckily, this is where Mode One Behavior, and the additional advice I am going to provide in this book, comes into play to help you out.

Mode One Behavior is valuable and effective primarily because it helps a man distinguish between a woman who is a "true 4" or "true 5" from a woman who is a "2 pretending to be a 4 or 5." This is the #1 concept that most PUA types fail to teach single men who are looking to become master seducers.

If all men were objectively-minded and avoided highhorse judgments of women's sexuality, more women would be enthusiastically receptive to engaging in brief episodes of hot, kinky, spontaneous casual sex.

Fact: no woman wants to be perceived as, or categorized as, a 'ho', a 'slut', or an 'easy lay' simply because she loves sex as much as YOU do. Do you quickly and easily have sex with every beautiful or sexy woman who invites you to?

I am going to tell you this key tip right now: If you are a single heterosexual man looking to improve your opportunities for getting laid, and particularly, getting women to engage in more episodes of short-term or non-monogamous sex with you, you need to possess these two characteristics:

- Learn how to be private and discreet. Do not have sex with women, and then turn around and tell all of your close male friends, fraternity brothers, and other male associates and acquaintances about all the "juicy details." Some women really don't care what other people think, so they won't care if you have a big mouth and tend to 'kiss & tell' with your buddies; but the vast majority of women are going to be turned off by this.

- Practice being non-judgmental toward women's sexual habits and activities. Quit calling a woman a 'ho' or a 'slut' simply because she gave you some pussy during your first or second date with her. Be flattered! She found you so attractive that she wanted to have sex with you on the first or second date. If you do not want anything long-term or monogamous with her, then simply avoid giving that woman the impression that you do want more. But don't turn around and say stupid shit like, "Aw man, that chick Linda I met at the party is a ho. She sucked my dick after my first dinner date with her. What a slut." I hear guys in their late teens or 20s make dumb comments like this all the time. He who lives in a glass house should not be throwing stones. That is stupid.

I guarantee you: once most women (and particularly "2s, 3s, and 4s") identify you as a man with a really big "kiss & tell" mouth or a man who is unnecessarily and harshly judgmental, your opportunities for hot, kinky casual sex with desirable women are going to dry up, and dry up quick.

Realistically, very few men reading this book expect to seduce a "true 5" and probably feel like there is no need for verbal seduction skills when interacting with a "1" since 1s are supposed to be "easy lays" anyway.

The vast majority of men reading this book are looking to seduce 2s and 3s, and possibly 4s. The challenge for you with most women you meet is going to be determining, "is this woman a true 4? Or is she a '1' or a '2' pretending to be a '3' or a '4?'

Also, as a man, you have to look out for the reverse. Some women who are really a 4 or a 5 will give you the misleading impression that they are a 1 or a 2.

Why would a woman who is a '4' pretend to be a '2'? In order to secure flattering attention, entertaining social companionship, empathetic listening ears, and financial and non-financial favors. Many men generally refer to these women as "Attention Whores" and "Cock Teasers."

In the same manner that I am harshly critical of men who lie to women and mislead them into believing they want something long-term and monogamous, when they really just want casual sex, I am equally critical of women who use the pretense of sexual companionship in order to play head games with guys, or receive financial and non-financial favors from them.

Karma is a mutha fucka. I already said to the men that if you fuck over a woman, and play with her emotions, you might catch the wrong woman at the wrong time, and end up having your car tires slashed. Same thing holds true for women. Avoid "cock-teasing" guys. Some women think this is fun, but you might cock-tease one guy who may turn out to be mentally disturbed (i.e., crazy). No woman needs a crazy stalker.

You notice I have a major underlying theme in just about all of my advice? Do not engage in manipulative head games with members of the opposite sex. It is totally unnecessary.

Bottom line: Stay away from being a psychological victim of the Madonna / Whore Complex. It is a lose-lose scenario. You won't get laid as much as you want to, and the women you perceive as "prudish good girls" will more than likely end up being sexually unsatisfied (because you only show your real kinky side to the women you perceive as 'freaks,' 'sluts' and 'whore' types anyway! Be real: You only want the 'good girl' type as a pretty 'trophy' on your shoulder at social events!)

My final thoughts for this preface section:

Do not try to get women who are true 4s and true 5s to have casual sex. You will leave these women psychologically and emotionally damaged, and in the long-run, they will not trust many men. Only pursue these women if your genuine interest is long-term and monogamous sex.

If your primary interest is short-term or non-monogamous sex, you should stick with pursuing women who are 1s, 2s and 3s. Women who are genuinely open to the idea of engaging in regular, semi-regular or occasional episodes of hot, kinky, spontaneous casual sex. This way, you have no regrets … and they have no regrets. No bitterness between the genders.

You want to learn how to use the power of words to break through the disingenuous, prudish façade of a “1 pretending to be a 3” or a “2 pretending to be a 4 or 5”? If you want to learn how to bring out a woman’s “Inner Freak,” then continue reading my friend.

PART ONE:
The Basics of the Verbal Seduction Mindset

This book is divided into two parts: The “self-help” portion (Part One) and the “examples of talking dirty to women” portion (Part Two). The stories in Part Two are fictional, but they are based on real life dialogue and real life scenarios I have had with women over the last 20-25 years.

The self-help portion (which is pretty much geared exclusively toward my male readers) is designed to provide you with what I feel are just about all of the psychological and verbal fundamentals of seducing a woman of interest.

Part One is divided into five chapters:

Chapter One
Social Programming: The #1 obstacle to seducing women

Chapter Two
If women love sex just as much as men, why all of the negative reactions in response to X-rated dirty talk?

Chapter Three
Developing Self-Confidence that is so strong, that it makes women feel “uncomfortable”

Chapter Four
Sexual Chemistry: The Good, The Bad, and The Unpredictable

Chapter Five
The Hypnotic Effect of Aural Sex: Using the power of words to break through a woman’s social programming

I have found that most women tend to present themselves to men, and the general public, as being much more prudish and erotically conservative than they really are, behind closed doors.

Virtually all women have an “inner kinky freak” side to them (True 5s excluded). The question is not so much, “is she kinky or is she prudish?” but rather, “is she going to reveal her kinky side to ME, or is she going to indefinitely ‘hold back’ and only show me her conservative, prudish side?”

Not all women want all men to know how kinky they are. I have known a woman to engage in a threesome with two men she just met, but turn around and make another man wait three months or longer before allowing him to have sex with her.

As a matter of fact, I once conducted an informal survey among some women who posted on the “Love & Relationships” message board forum on AskMen.com, in 2004. I asked them how willing they would be to engage in very open-minded, free-spirited, ‘kinky’ sex, such as group sex.

Most of the women who responded indicated that they have either only engaged in a handful of episodes of really kinky sex, or at minimum, they have regularly entertained the thought and fantasy of engaging in very hot, raw, super-kinky sex.

What was most surprising to many on the message board, was that most of the women said they would rather engage in really kinky sex with men (and possibly other women, for those with bisexual tendencies) who they did not know that well, and would probably never see or talk to again.

I was one of the few who were not surprised. I know exactly why many women are this way. In the upcoming chapters, I will share with you why so many women are sexually duplicitous and tend to present themselves as ‘fake prudes.’ Then, I will show you how to use the power of words and erotic language as a powerful tool to break through many women’s disingenuous, prudish façades.

Chapter One
Social Programming: The #1 obstacle to seducing women

If you have read my second paperback, Upfront and Straightforward, you already know that I divide women of interest into four general categories:

Reciprocators: Women who want you to have sex with them at some point in the near or distant future, and they have no problem letting you know this;

Rejecters: Women who do NOT want you to have sex with them at any point in the future, and they have no problem letting you know this;

Pretenders: Women who want you to have sex with them at some point in the near or distant future, but they will temporarily or indefinitely "pretend" they are not attracted to you, and are not particularly enthusiastic about sharing your company;

Timewasters: Women who, for the most part, are NOT attracted to you romantically or sexually, but they will temporarily or indefinitely give you the misleading impression that they are willing to potentially have sex with you, in order to motivate you to flatter and entertain them, be an empathetic listening ear when they are frustrated, or provide financial and non-financial favors when they need a helping hand;

Here is the 'bad' news: If you are spending a lot of hours, days, weeks and months trying to get women who are 'Rejecters' and 'Timewasters' into bed, you are truly wasting your (valuable) time.

This is arguably the #2 biggest mistake I see many single, heterosexual men make with women. The #1 mistake is not approaching women at all, because of the fear of being rejected, blown off, criticized, insulted or humiliated.

Plain and simple, there are just some women who are never, never, ever, ever going to date you or have sex with you. The quicker you accept that and deal with it, the less time you will waste pursuing women in an unproductive manner.

There is a term for men who persistently continue to pursue a woman, particularly in an aggressive manner, even though she has already made it crystal clear that she is not attracted or interested in having sex with you: It is called stalking. Do not allow yourself to be perceived as a psycho-stalker. Once you get that reputation, it is hard to shake.

Then there are some women who might be attracted to you, and possibly interested in having sex, but they are not at all interested in any form of casual sex. This brings me back to my categorization of where women fall on the erotically inhibited VS erotically uninhibited scale of “1” to “5.”

If a woman is attracted to you, but she is a “5,” you are not going to get her in bed. Do not even waste your time trying to. Again, a woman who is a “5” is barely interested in premarital sex, let alone casual sex. I have dated at least three or four women in my life long-term who were genuine 5s. I had sex with two of those women, and because our relationship did not end in marriage, those women regretted having sex with me.

Some men argue that ‘ethics’ has no place in the pursuit of casual sex. I argue that it does. Leave those 5s alone. I would take it a step further and say leave the 4s alone too. You know all of those women walking around right now saying things like “all men are dogs” or “all men are pigs?” Those are women who used to be 5s, but because they got 'tricked' or manipulated into having sex, they are now very bitter 4s.

I am not going to force you to follow all of my advice, but my best recommendation is to not pursue true 4s and true 5s for casual sex … even if some of those women happen to find you attractive and appealing. Let these women save their bodies for men who are genuinely interested in a long-term monogamous relationship with them. Don't mislead them.

If you do get a true 4 or true 5 in bed, there is a 99.99% chance that it is going to be because you lied, misled or manipulated them in some sort of way. I guarantee that it won't be because you were upfront and straightforwardly honest about your desire for short-term non-monogamous sex.

Now, on to the women who you should be pursuing for (casual) sex. The 1s, 2s and 3s.

At least two-thirds of the women who are 1s are going to be Reciprocators. Nine times out of ten, they are not going to play games, unless they are a Wholesome Pretender (i.e., a "1" pretending to be a "3," "4," or "5"). However, usually it is the 2s and 3s that try to present themselves as 4s and 5s.

Again, this is where Mode One Behavior comes into play.

For now, let us push the "Timewasters" to the side, and just concentrate on the Reciprocators, Rejecters and most importantly, the [Wholesome] Pretenders. Right in between enthusiastic reciprocation and abrupt rejection is "resistance" or "reluctance."

Why do we 'resist' some things that we want?

Let me break it down to you as if I am talking to a 10th grader.

I love German Chocolate cake. Absolutely love it. German Chocolate cake, Peach Cobbler, Mexican Wedding Cakes

(cookies), Lemon Cheesecake (homemade), and homemade ice cream are my Top 5 favorite desserts.

Quite naturally, if I am on a diet (let's say, a low-carb diet) and trying to get my body fat percentage down way low, I am not trying to binge on German Chocolate cake.

What would prevent me from "cheating" and eating a slice? My own justifications for resistance. Justifications for resistance come from days, weeks, months or years of psychologically "brainwashing" yourself that something is both "desirable & pleasurable," but yet, "detrimental in the long-run."

German Chocolate cake:

Why it is desirable & pleasurable: Taste great. Makes my taste buds happy. I love the frosting, and I love pecans.

What is it detrimental: Will throw me off of my diet. Cause me to gain weight and possibly become fat. Too much sugar can potentially give me cavities or worse, diabetes.

When something is completely desirable, and virtually no "downside," then we tend to have an easy choice on our hands: to accept what is offered, and reciprocate what is proposed.

On the flip side, when something offers nothing but detriments and drawbacks, and very few benefits, that also makes it easy for us to reject the offer, or decline the invitation.

At any given point in time, all of us human beings are guided by one of two types of behavior, if not both: our "impulsive" side and our "rational" side. I am not a licensed psychologist, so I am not going to attempt to get "too academic" about this, but generally speaking, even many in the field of psychology would agree that what I am saying is valid.

Each and every day, we have literally hundreds if not thousands of raw desires and emotional impulses running through our minds constantly.

As a man, have you ever been around a really attractive, sexy woman, and you just wanted to impulsively squeeze her tits or grab her ass? What stopped you? Have you ever had someone make you so angry, that you literally contemplated stabbing them with a knife or shooting them with a gun? What stopped you? Have you ever had your boss get on your nerves to the point where you wanted to curse them out AND flip up your middle finger? What stopped you?

Your conscious mind stopped you. The part of your mind that is the "gatekeeper" of your thoughts and impulses. The part of your mind that generally knows what is "right" or "wrong," "ethical" or "unethical," "legal" or "illegal," and "appropriate" or "inappropriate." Were you born with a natural sense of 'right' vs. 'wrong'? To a degree, yes. For the most part, no. Most of what we deem as 'appropriate' behavior vs. 'inappropriate' behavior comes from what is known as our "social conditioning" or "social programming."

When I spoke in London in November 2010 at the Direct Approach Dating Summit for Men, there were no two words I used more frequently, particularly when talking about why women behave the way they do … than "social programming."

If you are a rational, objective-minded, obedient citizen of society, your social programming governs just about everything you do, or avoid doing. Most of your morals, values, ethics and personal principles come from your social programming.

When many of your raw desires and emotional impulses say, "Yes!" your social programming says, "No!" even louder. When your raw desires and emotional impulses say, "I want that!" your social programming yells out, "you DON'T NEED that!"

Have you ever watched a cartoon, and they had a character that had a little “angel” on the right shoulder, and a little “devil” on the left shoulder? You can say, in a manner of speaking, that your social programming is the “little angel” of your mind, and your raw desires and emotional impulses are the “little devil” of your mind.

Whichever voice speaks loudest in your mind at any given point in time, is the voice you will listen to.

You ever meet people, such as certain teenagers, who are very rebellious in nature? You tend to become rebellious toward others, and toward society, when you are in a phase where you want to obey your impulsive side more than your social programming side. High school students experience this a lot.

Many people, and particularly many teenagers, view social programming as the portion of their mind that offers boring, conventional advice, and their impulsive side as the portion that can create spontaneous excitement, and more social enjoyment.

There is only one thing worse than being rebellious. You ever interact with someone who doesn’t really seem to have a social programming side? No rational, objective-mind at all? Just about all of their behavior is impetuous and impulsive?

Most psychopaths and sociopaths are like this. Again, I do not want to get too technical or too academic, but in layman’s terms, that is the basis behind people who are typically perceived as “delusional,” “psychotic,” “mentally insane,” “mentally disturbed,” or simply “crazy.” These people have no conscious sense of “right vs. wrong” or “appropriate vs. inappropriate.” Their mind operates primarily, or even exclusively, on their raw desires and emotional impulses.

A rebellious person is usually, at their psychological core, sane. They are consciously aware of the fact that they are going against the recommendations of their social programming. A 'crazy' person does not even realize that social programming even exists. At minimum, the 'volume of the inner voice' of their social programming is so low, that they never hear it, or consciously acknowledge or adhere to it.

We all have our moments when we give in to our raw desires and emotional impulses more so than the rational, logical, objective, social programming side of our minds.

You ever had your life threatened? You ever had your sense of survival threatened? (Warning: MOVIE SPOILER ALERT coming!!) Remember the climactic scene in the suspense thriller, Se7en? With Morgan Freeman and Brad Pitt?? Do you think Pitt's character listened to his social programming side? Or his emotionally impulsive side?

If you saw the climactic scene in that film, you saw Brad Pitt's character sorting through his emotions while listening to the reasoning of his law partner (Morgan Freeman's character). In that moment, Pitt's character was experiencing an 'internal conflict.' His raw, emotional impulses were at war with his social programming. In the end, his emotional side won.

I can name at least a handful of times in my life where I "snapped" (i.e., experienced "temporary insanity"). I think most of us have, either once, twice or three times at a minimum. Publicly or privately. When you 'snap,' your entire mind is being controlled by your raw desires and your emotional impulses. The voice of your rational thinking and social programming has been silenced and temporarily disabled.

Returning to the subject of sexual seduction, you are generally going to run into three scenarios in your attempt to seduce a woman:

Scenario #1: Full Reciprocation

Your Desire: You want to fuck the woman of interest
Your Action(s): You let her know upfront and straightforwardly that you want to exchange orgasms with her
Her Thought Process: She cannot identify a valid reason NOT to have sex with you End Result: You end up having sex with this woman.

Scenario #2: Abrupt Rejection

Your Desire: You want to fuck the woman of interest
Your Action(s): You let her know upfront and straightforwardly that you want to exchange orgasms with her
Her Thought Process: She perceives you as "not being her type," and she has absolutely NO INTEREST in premarital sex or short-term, non-monogamous sex End Result: This woman ends up letting you know, in one way or another, that she simply is not interested in sharing your company in an intimate manner. She abruptly ends the conversation.

Scenario #3: The woman is reluctant & is RESISTING you

Your Desire: You want to fuck the woman of interest
Your Action(s): You let her know upfront and straightforwardly that you want to exchange orgasms with her
Her Thought Process: Raw Desire & Emotional Impulse Voice: "He is handsome. He is sexy. He is confident. I want to allow him to have sex with me!!" Social Programming Voice: "You are an innocent, wholesome GOOD GIRL!!! If you have sex with him too quickly or too easily, he will perceive you as a 'whore' or a 'slut'!! Don't give into your carnal desires!!"
End Result: She continues chatting with you, but starts making statements like, "I am a respectable woman!" and "I am not some easy lay!!" She emphasizes that she is ideally looking for a long-term monogamous relationship.

Realistically, for the situations presented in Scenario #1 and Scenario #2, you don't need the advice offered in this book.

Scenario #1 demonstrates that not all sex happens as a direct result of seduction. I know some men, such as professional athletes, singers, musicians and other Entertainment Industry celebrities and public figure types that rarely, if ever, need to truly "seduce" a woman in order to have sex with them.

There are some men who just "have it." God bless their hearts. They can just do whatever it is they do, and women will "throw the pussy at them." I have had those moments myself with certain women. There have been some women who I have had sex with, where I did not really do anything or say anything out of the ordinary. The woman liked my physical appearance and overall level of confidence, and she simply gave me a "green light" to fuck her. Gotta love those moments, if you experience them.

Verbal Seduction Rule #1: Do not attempt to seduce a woman into having sex with you in situations where the use of verbal seduction skills is not really needed.

If a woman you approached is just really, really attracted to you, and even more so, really, really horny, there is no need to go into "seduction mode." Just get down to business.

For Scenario #2, you did your part. You let the woman know where you were coming from, and she let you know straightforwardly that she was not on the same page. Leave her alone and move on to the next woman of interest. Too many men waste too much time (and money) becoming overly-persistent with women who have clearly rejected them. LET IT GO. Remember what I said about pursuing women who are "4s" and "5s?" Leave those women alone. Go after the 1s, 2s and 3s.

Lying to women, misleading women and manipulating women is not representative of seduction. Would you want someone to sell you a vegetarian entrée item that actually had small bits of beef and chicken in it? No. No one wants to pay money for a product or service that is not representative of what was advertised. That is false advertising and is highly unethical.

I will repeat this ad nauseam: Do not try to get women to engage in short-term or non-monogamous sex, by giving them the misleading impression that you want long-term or monogamous sex. I don't care what argument you try to come up with, it is just plain wrong. You are asking for bad karma.

Verbal Seduction Rule #2: The primary purpose of seduction is to counteract and overcome a woman's feelings of indifference, reluctance or resistance; Seduction is not representative of becoming annoyingly persistent, misleading or manipulative, in response to a woman rejecting you.

It is only for situations like Scenario #3, that I chose to write this book and offer some of my best advice. Situations where a woman is not fully reciprocating your sexual desires and interests, but she is not abruptly rejecting you either. Remember Scarlett Johansson's character, Cristina in the Woody Allen romantic comedy, Vicky Cristina Barcelona?

In this film, the character of Juan Antonio (wonderfully played by Javier Bardem) exhibits a lot of 'Mode One' behavior. Juan proposes a ménage-a-trois with Cristina and Vicky, Vicky immediately has an adverse reaction, but Cristina is, for the most part, down with Juan's program. Cristina lets Juan know that she's not going to give up the pussy too easily though. "You have to seduce me…" Cristina says to Juan.

Quick recap thus far:

1) The first factor that is going to affect whether you have an 'easy' time seducing a woman or a more challenging time, depends on how much of a woman's social programming you have to break through.

A woman who is a genuine "5" adheres to the voice of her social programming, virtually all the time. She wants to get married, and she generally cares about what society thinks of her. On the flip side, a woman who is a "1" listens more to the voice of her raw desires and emotional impulses. She doesn't care what other people think of her sexual habits and activities.

2) Sometimes, you simply do not need to seduce a woman. If a woman finds your physical appearance attractive, or your overall attitude, demeanor, disposition, behavior, and manner of verbal expression appealing and sexy, a woman will simply give you the 'green light' to have sex with her.

3) Lying to women, misleading women, or manipulating women to get them in bed is highly unethical, and is not representative of effective seduction. Do not try to 'trick' women into having sex.

4) Do not waste time constantly pursuing a woman who has already made it clear that she has very little, if any, interest in sharing your company in a romantic or sexual manner. Move on to the next woman of interest.

Alan Roger Currie

Chapter Two

If women love sex just as much as men, why some of the negative reactions in response to X-rated dirty talk?

Many women are so good at being sexually duplicitous, that they leave men confused and in the dark about their true sexuality. There are some men who believe women don't like sex at all (I know … crazy huh?). Most women LOVE sex.

Let me make this clear: All women have a libido. All women have a desire for sex, to one degree or another. As I alluded to in Chapter One and my previous books, there are many women who know how to do a good job of 'pretending' as though they are indifferent toward enjoyable sex and pleasurable orgasms, but trust me … for the vast majority of women, that is an "act." A performance. A façade. Just about all women get horny.

Now granted, there are some women who have had very bad sexual experiences that have left them deeply scarred. I am very sympathetic to these women. Some of these women have been raped, date-raped, sexually assaulted, or even sexually abused when they were children or teenagers by their own family members, relatives, and others who they trusted. Many of these women will always associate the act of sex with regret, guilt, bad feelings, anger, frustration and bitterness. These women are the exception, rather than the norm.

Many women, even if their experiences associated with sex have been generally 'good' experiences, will still offer an adverse reaction to a man who attempts to engage them in a sexually provocative and erotically explicit conversation.

Why? If most women love sex just as much as men do, why would they have any sort of 'negative' reaction to erotic dirty talk or a lengthy, detailed discussion about sex?

First, refer back to Chapter One. In two words, social programming. Most women are raised and socially conditioned to present themselves as "wife material," for a man who is financially secure and self-sufficient, with good morals, values and ethics, and willing to take care of her and her children.

Most women are brought up by their parents and elders to believe that very few, if any, men will have a desire to propose marriage to a woman with a "questionable past" (i.e., a woman who has a history of frequent episodes of kinky or promiscuous sex). To a degree, her parents' assumptions are valid. Many men are blatant hypocrites when it comes to sex.

As I mentioned in my preface, many men are very, very judgmental toward the sexual habits and activities of women. Not only are there men who are judgmental about women, towards whom they look at as "girlfriend" or "wife material," I have conversed with men who were judgmental towards women, about whom they were only interested in casual sex.

Men, if you think women are generally "full of shit" and full of head games regarding sex, take one look in the mirror and see who is to blame. That's right … YOU.

I know that some men reading this right now are probably saying, "Whoa! Are you on THEIR SIDE, Alan? Why are you blasting us? What did we do? Aren't women the ones most guilty of being lying, scandalous, manipulative game players?"

Make no mistake. Very few women are "innocent, wholesome angels." They have their share of flaws and weaknesses which I will cover in detail throughout this book.

The United States of America is primarily a Judeo-Christian society, which promotes a lot of conservative, puritanical values when it comes to dating and relationships, particularly sex.

Casual sex will never be promoted in this society as an acceptable form of sex. Long-term and monogamous sexual relationships, and particularly marriage, will always be the ideal standard in American society and many other countries.

Realistically, most men do not want just any man fucking their mother, sister(s) or daughter(s). Men are just hypocritical that way. Men want to fuck YOUR mother, YOUR sister, and YOUR daughter, but we do not want any man doing the same to a female relative of ours. Many of us are ready to pull out a shotgun if a guy tries to seduce our daughter(s) into casual sex.

Did you see the romantic comedy, Crazy, Stupid, Love starring Steve Carrell and Ryan Gosling? (Warning: MOVIE SPOILER!) Steve Carrell's character was cool with Ryan Gosling's character (who was a prolific womanizer), until he found out that Ryan Gosling's character was dating and fucking his daughter. Then, Carrell's character flipped the fuck out.

Want to test a friendship? Tell one of your close male friends that you want to have casual sex with his mother, sister, or daughter. There is at least a fifty-percent chance that this close friend of yours will either a) curse you the fuck out, or worse, b) try to punch you in the face. Most men can handle one of their friends having sex with their sister if it is within the context of a long-term monogamous relationship. Casually? One night-stand? Weekend fling? Hell no.

The next time you are tempted to criticize women for behaving in a prudish manner toward you, in response to a sexual advance, don't be too quick to blame women. Instead, look at many of the fellow members of your own gender.

This is one of the many reasons why a good number of women suffer from internal conflicts. A lot of women have the raw desire and emotional impulse to engage in hot, kinky, casual sex, but their more conservative social programming starts offering various justifications for resistance.

Let us take another look at the “1” to “5” scale of women who are erotically inhibited and prudish VS. those women who are more open-minded, free-spirited and erotically uninhibited:

Women who are genuine 5s are looking to get married, with the exception of those women who might want to join a convent or a monastery and become a nun, or a woman who suffered a high degree of sexual trauma in her life, and now is completely disinterested in enjoying herself sexually, in any way at all.

Women who are true 5s are going to adhere to their social programming in the most strict, disciplined, and consistent manner. Women who are true 5s usually frown on the idea of both casual sex and premarital sex.

If you attempt to “talk dirty” to a woman who is a genuine 5, there is probably a 99.9% chance that she is going to be completely turned off. Especially if your erotic dirty talk includes X-rated or XXX-rated language and descriptions.

If you attempt to engage a true 5 in erotic dirty talk, they will probably let you know their disinterest with their body language, more so than their words. Nine times out of ten, they will not become dramatic, antagonistic or insulting with their words. They will not “go off” on you. They will just quickly and calmly find a way to end their conversation with you, and eventually avoid conversing with you ever again.

For women who are true 5s, marriage is not about enjoyable sex and pleasurable orgasms. Marriage is about building a family, raising healthy children with good values, and being financially secure. Enjoyable sex is a very secondary priority for most true 5s, and for some, not even a priority at all.

A woman who is a genuine “4” has her share of erotically uninhibited thoughts and kinky fantasies. She has a very ‘normal’ and healthy sex drive.

A woman who is a 4 simply cares a lot about her image and reputation, and what other people think. She does not want to be criticized, and she does not want men or other women passing judgment on her sexual choices, behavior or activities.

Women who are true 4s are not as adverse to premarital sex as women who are 5s. These are the women who at some point in history created the concept of the “long-term boyfriend and girlfriend” relationship that is so common in society.

A boyfriend-girlfriend relationship holds a benefit for both the man and the woman involved. For the woman, this type of relationship is a way to engage in premarital sex without risking your reputation. Very few men or women will label you a ‘ho,’ a ‘slut,’ or an ‘easy lay’ if you are having sex on a regular basis with a man who you refer to as your ‘boyfriend.’ A woman with a high sex drive who does not want to be labeled is always going to gravitate toward a ‘boyfriend-girlfriend’ relationship.

If a woman has sex with five guys in three years in a very casual manner, many of her close friends might begin to perceive her as somewhat “promiscuous.” If a woman dates five men for an average of six months each under the guise of a “boyfriend-girlfriend” relationship in a three year period, very few men or women will criticize her. Put it under the “looking at four ounces of water in an eight ounce glass as either half-full or half-empty” scenario. Same thing – different perception.

For the man, you send off a signal to other men that your ‘girlfriend’ is “off limits” as far as them making sexual advances or engaging in highly flirtatious behavior toward your steady lady. Calling her your ‘girlfriend’ is like ‘marking your territory.’

Men are very egotistical and territorial. This is why a lot of men cheat. Men, as a group, do not put nearly as much emphasis on monogamy as women do, as a group. Many men want to have sex with dozens of women, but they do not want any other man having sex with their favorite sex partner or the mother of their children. So, they cheat. Most men do not believe in that concept of "what's good for the goose is good for the gander."

There is nothing "legal" about a 'boyfriend-girlfriend' relationship. That categorization is just an informal "title." A label. Truth? In the big picture, the title of 'boyfriend' and 'girlfriend' means jack shit.

Women who are true 4s are generally going to frown on the idea of casual, non-monogamous sex. If you try to engage a true 4 in a sexually provocative conversation, you are probably going to receive a less-than-enthusiastic reaction from them. Their reaction won't be as prudish as a true 5, but they are not going to be receptive. They might be amused or entertained.

A woman who is a true 4 is one that does not necessarily agree with all of the social conditioning and brainwashing that she has absorbed over the years, but again, she can't help but to care what other people think of her. Women who are true 4s have thin-skin, and harsh criticisms and judgmental insults genuinely do affect them in a negative manner.

You know when a true 4 will "let her hair down" and show you her real kinky, freaky side? When she is in a long-term relationship with you – or, interesting enough – when she is in a long-term monogamous relationship with another (more prudish) man. Women who are true 4s have been known to cheat on their boyfriends or husbands. So, they can be susceptible to a "kinky affair" if their steady companion is a sexual fuddy-duddy. But again, if they are single, they are going to avoid indulging in short term or non-monogamous sex.

The #1 preference of a woman who is a genuine 3 is to be in a long-term monogamous relationship, but they have no problem indulging in some form of casual sex with the right partner. A woman who is a 3 is very selective about who she has casual sex with. She will not drop her panties for just any guy with a handsome face, or charming personality.

Women who are 3s tend to be very private and discreet about their casual sex encounters. They "kinda, sorta" care what other people think, but they also "kinda, sorta" don't.

Women who are 3s generally do not have an adverse reaction to a man who tries to engage them in a sexually provocative conversation. If they are attracted to you, and feel some chemistry between you two, they will flow with the conversation. If they do not find you appealing, they will simply let you know that they are not interested in any type of lengthy or detailed conversation that centers on sex.

Most true 4s and true 5s are the women who will typically avoid engaging in manipulative "head games" with men. A woman who is a 3 might pretend to be a "4" or "5" at times, but not usually. Women who are 3s are not prudish, but if they get some good dick, they want it regularly. In other words, 3s are not too fond of one-night stands or weekend flings. They would much prefer to have a long-term "fuck buddy" or be involved in a "friends with benefits" type relationship.

With a 3, you have to be confident and bring your "A" game, because most of the time, other men will be competing with you for the attention and sexual companionship of a 3 (I will talk about confidence in more detail, and how it affects women's sexual responses to you, in the very next chapter).

In my estimation, women who are 2s are going to be the "trickiest," most manipulative, and most duplicitous of all of the five general groups of women. Whenever I talk about women who are Wholesome Pretenders or Erotic Hypocrites, I am usually referring to women who have the erotic nature of a "2".

The first thing you have to remember about women who are 2s, is that they really do not want you to know that they are a 2. More often than not, a woman who is a 2 is going to present herself as a 4 or a 5, and at minimum, a 3.

A woman who is a 2 is like a sexual chameleon. If she is in the company of a man who she knows can see through her disingenuous, prudish façade, she will get as raw and kinky as she thinks that man wants her to be, assuming that she is attracted to him. On the other hand, if she is in the company of a guy who immediately puts her on a pedestal, and she perceives him as being somewhat naïve or more conservative, prudish and monogamous than she is, she will quickly look to present herself as more of a "4" or a "5".

Men who suffer from the aforementioned Madonna / Whore Complex tend to want to date and marry women who are very classy, conservative and prudish (i.e., 5s), but they want to have sex on the side with women who very raw, kinky, promiscuous and submissive (1s and 2s). They do not want their wives to be kinky, and they do not want their mistresses to be prudish in any way whatsoever.

This is the same with a woman who is a "2". 2s do not want to date or marry a man who is really kinky or very promiscuous. They only want to have sex with those types in a casual manner. 2s want to marry a man who is a "nice guy," with good morals, values, and principles, and who earns enough money to take care of himself, her, and their potential children.

The only men who 2s want to have kinky, casual sex with are those who are good at identifying and breaking down their social façades, and more importantly, men who they feel are going to be really, really good in bed. These women know how to separate the concept of “love” from “good sex” (in the same way that most womanizing men can).

If you have ever met a woman who was very conservative with her husband or boyfriend, but then you found out later that she was participating in orgies and group sex with other men on the side, this is a classic example of a woman who is a 2. These women are extremely hypocritical and duplicitous when it comes to their sexual habits, preferences and activities.

If you attempt to verbally seduce a 2, initially she is going to “test you.” She is going to see if you are really an Alpha Male or “bad boy” type – or if you are PRETENDING to be one. If she perceives you as a ‘beta male’ who is looking to get laid, she is going to tear you a new one. This is the type of woman that if you say something really X-rated or XXX-rated, you can never, ever apologize. Never. If you do – you are dead meat.

I have had many interactions with 2s, and I have broken them down the vast majority of the time. I know their game. Just about all 2s will initially come across as prudes or semi-prudes, but in reality, they are “fake prudes.” I have literally met women who cursed me out for 10-15 minutes for being “too X-rated,” only to turn around and suck my dick and lick my balls an hour or two later, after I broke them down.

When I lived in Los Angeles, I met a lot of these women. Dozens of them. When they were around clean-cut, naïve, conservative, church-going type men, they would behave like a 4 or a 5. When they were around more urban, raw, street-wise, perceptive, egotistically indifferent “bad boy” types of men, they would show their true (kinky) colors, almost immediately.

Verbal Seduction Rule #3: If you are going to commit an 'error' in your assumption about a woman's sexuality, it is always better to assume that a woman who behaves like a 4 or a 5 is actually a 2, than to assume that a woman who is really a 2 is a 4 or a 5. If your mistake is the former, you'll get a second chance; If your mistake is the latter, that woman will never reveal her "inner freak" to you.

Most of the advice you have received from my books, Mode One and Upfront and Straightforward, as well as the remainder of this book, is primarily going to apply to women who are 1s, 2s, 3s and possibly 4s. There is no advice needed for women who are genuine 5s. And speaking of 1s . . .

Any woman who is a street prostitute, professional Call Girl or Erotic Escort, or an adult film actress, would qualify as a 1. Even some of the women who may look like your "All-American Girl Next Door" are 1s. Don't let the "innocent face" fool you.

A woman who is a 1 is essentially someone who is very kinky, and to one degree or another, very promiscuous. She does not give a fuck who knows about her sexual habits and activities or who passes judgment on them. She is who she is, and if you don't like it, that is your problem. Not hers.

On the positive side, women who are 1s will usually avoid engaging in "head games" with you. They are usually secure in who they are and what they want. They feel no need to put on a prudish façade for their friends or for the general public.

If a woman who is a 2, 3, or 4 were to be videotaped having sex, they would try their best to hide it from their family, friends and co-workers. If a woman who is a 1 was videotaped having sex, they would not care who saw it. As a matter of fact, they would HOPE that others saw it. That is how kinky and exhibitionistic they are.

Women who are 2s, 3s and 4s who are into various forms of polyamorous dating (e.g., swinging, couple swapping, open relationships/marriages, etc.) would make every effort to keep that a "secret." A woman who is a 1 would not care if others found out. There are no 'skeletons' in her closet.

The downside of having sex with these types of women is that if you become attached, loyalty or monogamy is not a top priority for them. Also, some men may say things to you such as, "Your new sex partner is a slut!" Will you have thick skin or thin skin? Do you care about the opinions, criticisms and expectations of others? Many egotistically insecure men do.

I have had sex with women who were 1s, and I had no problems with them. Some people say, "1s are more likely to have an STD!" Bullshit. I have known women who were 3s and 4s to give men STDs as much or more than women who were 1s. Just because a woman is a 1 does not mean she does not care about her health or fails to practice safe sex.

Many men lose interest in having sex with women who are 1s because they feel like 1s are not enough of an "egotistical challenge." Yeah, right. Is the purpose of having sex to enjoy yourself and experience a pleasurable orgasm? Or is the purpose of sex to brag to your male friends that you "conquered" some woman who you perceived as a 'challenge' because your male friends categorize her as an "8," "9," or "10," on some subjective beauty scale? Wake the fuck up fellas.

I remember times when I was young, I would tell my mother that I was hungry. She would say, "I have some apples, grapes, oranges and peaches in the refrigerator." I would say, "I don't want any fruit. I want something really, really good!"

I wanted a cheeseburger and fries, some pizza, some ice cream and cake, or some cookies. My mother would say, “If you do not want what I offered (the fruit), then you must not be really hungry. You just have a ‘taste’ for something. Having a taste for something is different than being truly hungry.”

I know men and women who are like this when it comes to jobs. For example, for most of my adult life, if I did not have a permanent job, I would usually do “temp” work. Many of my temp assignments would range from one day to over a year. I had some men and women tell me, “I refuse to do any temp work. I will just wait until I find a [permanent] job in my chosen field.” And many of those men and women were flat broke.

It is the same with the desire for sex. If you are horny, you are horny. If you want enjoyable sexual companionship, you want enjoyable companionship. I can see men being a wee bit nitpicky, and even a wee bit judgmental when it comes to choosing a woman to be your future wife, but for casual sex??

I am not suggesting that when a man wants casual sex, he should go after ‘just any woman,’ who offers a reciprocal response to his sexual advances. On the flip side however, you do not need to limit yourself to those women who qualify as legitimate candidates for Maxim Magazine’s Hot 100 List either.

I will admit: My closest friends know that when it comes to long-term monogamous relationships, I am pretty selective. Particularly when it comes to a woman’s moral character and sense of honesty and integrity. I love women who are honest.

When my interest is casual sex though, I just want a woman who is not a psychotic “stalker” type, a woman with no STDs, and a woman with no prudish tendencies. I want a woman with whom I can have a good time in bed. If I can find all of those qualities from a woman who is a 1, I am cool with that.

Quick recap thus far:

1) Even women who enjoy sex may initially or indefinitely offer an adverse reaction to highly provocative, erotically explicit conversations.

Generally speaking, it is a woman's long-term relationship or marriage goals, her past sexual experiences, and her overall social programming that will determine if she is immediately receptive to a forthright sexual advance, or turned off by one.

2) Similarly, how receptive a woman is to your verbal seduction efforts depends heavily upon whether she is prudish and monogamous, or if she is more open-minded, free-spirited and erotically uninhibited.

3) A woman who is a genuine 5 is a woman who only approves of sex within the context of marriage, or a relationship that is very close in nature to marriage.

Some women who are 5s may have experienced some sort of sexual trauma in their life, such as rape, date-rape, child molestation or assault.

4) Women who are 4s generally frown up on invitations to engage in casual sex, and prefer to only engage in sex when they are involved in a long-term "boyfriend-girlfriend" relationship. These women are paranoid about their reputation.

5) Women who are 3s will engage in select episodes of casual sex, but rarely will indulge in a one-night stand.

6) Women who are 2s are the most sexually duplicitous of the five types. With some men, they are very kinky and promiscuous, but with others, they will present themselves as very conservative and prudish.

7) Women who are 1s are very erotically uninhibited, and even promiscuous. They really do not care about the opinions, criticisms, and judgments of others.

Chapter Three

Developing Self-Confidence that is so strong, that it makes women feel “uncomfortable”

If you pick up five self-help books for men, no less than three of them will focus on improving your degree of self-confidence, your degree of self-assurance, or your self-esteem.

Many men and women make the mistake of looking at the concept of self-confidence as something you “have” or “do not have.” That is so untrue. Self-confidence is something you use or you fail to use.

Remember the Star Wars series by George Lucas? In each movie in the six-part film series, they mention the concept of “The Force.” Many of the film’s characters would say, “May The Force Be With You.” I look at a bold, fearless sense of self-confidence as being similar to the concept of “The Force.”

‘The Force’ was identified as this supernatural, spiritual power that all individuals had access to, but not everyone knew how to utilize the full power of it. I feel the same way about self-confidence. Most men do not know how to tap into the reservoir of psychological power, known as self-confidence.

Think of your muscles. Just about every human being on earth is in possession of a set of muscles on their body. Now, if you notice, some men and women have bigger and stronger muscles than others. Most of these men and women were not just “born with” a set of big, strong muscles.

Most of the men I know who have big muscles have them because they were a) constantly using their muscles, and b) they provided their muscles with a high degree of resistance.

When you lift free weights, you are providing your muscles with some degree of resistance. In other words, in order for your muscles to become bigger, stronger or more defined, you have to work those muscles and challenge them.

Your degree of self-confidence is the "psychological equivalent" to your muscles. If you rarely, if ever, use your self-confidence, it becomes weak. If you constantly use your self-confidence, and challenge your self-confidence, your self-confidence becomes stronger and more powerful.

If the only women you think you can attract are those who are generally unappealing, and never push yourself to approach women you find "intimidating," to one degree or another, your confidence is never going to grow stronger.

Using the subjective beauty scale of "1" to "10," if you are a man who has traditionally only approached women who you perceived to be a "4," "5," or "6," then you need to go out and start approaching women you perceive to be a "7," "8," "9," or "10." Only then will your confidence get stronger.

Verbal Seduction Rule #4: In order to develop a bold, fearless sense of self-confidence and self-assurance, you should always push yourself to approach women who you find intimidating. Get out of your "comfort zone."

Always approach those women who you are the most afraid of being rejected by. Some men ask, "Won't rejection by many women diminish your sense of self-confidence?" No. That is a myth. If you put me in a room with ten beautiful, sexy women who I find "intimidating" to some degree, and I approach and converse with all ten, my confidence is going to get stronger even if none of those ten women agree to date me or have sex with me. Taking action and conquering fears and insecurities always improves your sense of self-confidence.

The only thing that would diminish my confidence is if I went into that same room, and I failed to say anything to any of those women. If I allowed my fear of rejection to immobilize me.

Lack of taking action and giving into fear is what diminishes your sense of self-confidence – not rejection.

I'm getting ready to tell you something that not too many professional Dating Coaches or Seduction Gurus will tell you:

It is not always a 'good' thing or a 'beneficial' action to try to make women feel "comfortable" in your presence. Many times, when in the act of seduction, you WANT women to feel a wee bit "uncomfortable" in your presence – That "uncomfortable" feeling in a woman is what eventually elevates the degree of erotic tension between you and the woman you're attempting to seduce.

Sometimes it can be to your advantage to make a woman feel 'comfortable' in your presence. However often, it is the worst thing you can do. The same thing goes for making a woman feel 'uncomfortable.' Sometimes that works to your advantage, but often it does not.

When is it a GOOD THING for a woman to feel "comfortable" in your presence?

When you are already involved in a romantic relationship with a woman, or you have already engaged in sexual activity, or you know for a fact that a woman is definitely interested in dating and having sex with you, then it is okay to flow with the "comfortable" factor.

The sparks between you two are already there. They do not have to be developed. The woman is “comfortable” because she already knows that you have not attempted to physically or emotionally harm her, and there is still a lot of sexual chemistry that underlies your relationship. This is a good thing. You do not really need to change anything here.

When is it a BAD THING for a woman to feel “comfortable” in your presence?

Believe it or not, I have had women tell me that one of the reasons why they had absolutely no desire to have sex with a man, was because they felt “very comfortable” in his presence.

In some men’s minds, that might be a confusing oxymoron, but for some women, it is the truth.

Why would a woman lose interest in having sex with a man because she feels ‘very comfortable’ in his presence?

Because for some women, the idea of feeling ‘comfortable’ in your presence reminds them of being in the presence of their father, grandfather, uncle, brother, cousin or son. In some women’s minds, “very comfortable = platonic interest only.”

Once a woman perceives you as a more of a “play brother” and another “platonic friend,” you can pretty much kiss the idea of having sex with that woman goodbye. The dreaded “friend zone” is a place in a woman’s mind that has a very accessible “entry” zone, but a very hard-to-find “exit” zone.

When is it a GOOD THING for a woman to feel “uncomfortable” in your presence?

Often, when men and women are in the presence of someone who they are really attracted to, either romantically or sexually, they tend to become nervous, tense, intimidated, and even, “uncomfortable.”

I remember once at a party in Chicago, I had a woman who I knew casually tell me, "Alan, you have a very intimidating presence when you are being really serious, and when you are looking at a woman directly in her eyes. When you are being funny and cracking jokes, I feel totally comfortable in your presence. But when you are serious, not talking much, and you have that direct eye contact thing going on, I feel somewhat 'uncomfortable' in your presence."

I have received comments similar to this from dozens of women. Many of these women I ended up having sex with, or if not physical sex, phone sex. Some, I just left feeling intrigued.

Did you see the movie 9 1/2 Weeks? By today's standards, this movie would be no big deal, but when it premiered in 1986, it was probably the closest an R-rated film had ever been to an X-rated adult film, in terms of explicit sexuality. It arguably ushered in the genre known as "soft porn."

When John (actor Mickey Rourke) first meets Elizabeth (actress Kim Basinger) in a meat / fresh seafood shop in New York City, he does not do much talking. As a matter of fact, he does not say anything to her. Not one word. He just looks at her. Directly in her eyes. Then, he leaves the shop.

You can tell by Elizabeth's reaction that she was left feeling both intrigued and intimidated. Elizabeth was somewhat "uncomfortable" in John's presence, but in a GOOD way. Sure enough, eventually the two hook up, and begin a torrid sexual relationship where John gets Elizabeth to reveal her kinky side.

This is why I rarely like to do too much talking when I first meet a woman who I am sexually attracted to. I prefer to listen instead, even if I was the one who initiated the conversation. I describe this in my book, Mode One: too much talking from the man can be a huge turnoff for a woman. This is especially true if you are engaging in a lot of "fluff talk," trivial "chit chat," or entertaining, but unproductive "small talk."

When is it a BAD THING for a woman to feel "uncomfortable" in your presence?

No woman, or even a man for that matter, likes to feel like their sense of physical safety is at risk. You never want to approach a woman in a manner that makes her feel "scared" of you, or makes her feel like you are going to physically assault her or harm her in any way. This is when you will make a woman feel uncomfortable in a 'bad' way.

A woman does not like to feel like she is in the presence of someone who is too physically aggressive, or gives off signs that he may be mentally disturbed, or is a 'stalker' type.

One thing I have learned from my interactions with women, is that being highly sexual with women in an "indirect" way, can be a major turn off. It makes you come across as 'creepy' (and women don't like 'creepy' men). You need to be more direct.

For example, eye contact. If you are talking to a woman about something to do with sex, but are not maintaining eye contact with that woman … and look 'nervous,' uneasy, and non-confident – there is a great chance that you are going to come across as 'creepy' in that woman's mind.

Two characteristics that make MOST women (not all, but MOST) feel at ease in your presence:

1) A very calm, relaxed, self-assured demeanor

2) Confident, direct eye contact

I cannot tell you how many women have told me that they feel very, very uncomfortable when in the presence of a man who cannot look them in the eyes, for more than a micro-second.

I have had men say to me, “I thought it was perceived as ‘rude’ to just stare at a woman?” Well, yes, and no.

If you go near a woman … and you just stare at her for no apparent reason, and you are not actively in conversation with her or standing a few feet away, then that has a chance of being perceived by a woman as “rude” or “creepy.”

If you are in conversation with a woman, and you are standing or sitting within three feet or less of “her space,” then it is completely fine for you to look a woman directly in her eyes for an indefinite period of time, even if you are not saying anything. If a woman is attracted to you, she will find that non-verbal gesture to be very sexy and appealing.

Verbal Seduction Rule #5: Never approach a woman, and start talking about sex with her, just for the sake of talking about sex, particularly, if you seem ‘nervous,’ uneasy, or you are not maintaining any sort of confident eye contact with her. That will most likely ‘creep’ her out. If you are going to talk about anything related to sex, do so in a very calm, easygoing, direct and confident manner, while maintaining a high degree of direct eye contact with her.

Remember at the bottom of Page 22, I alluded to the fact that many women who I have surveyed said that they are more likely to have really, really kinky sex with a man who they just met or have not interacted with too much, rather than a man who they have known for a while?

This relates to the whole “comfortable” versus “uncomfortable” scenario. When a woman feels comfortable with you as a ‘friend,’ she is more likely to feel ‘uncomfortable’ revealing her ‘sex siren’ / ‘kinky freak’ side to you. She believes you will eventually pass judgment on her, and lose respect for her.

Once you place a woman on the mythical "pedestal," the vast majority of women do not want to step down off of it.

This is why I said earlier that if you are going to be wrong in your assumptions about a woman, it is much better to assume that a "4" is a "2," than to assume that a "2" is a "4." Because once you do the latter, that woman is going to indefinitely present herself to you as a "4," even if in reality, she is a more kinky, uninhibited "2." You put her on a pedestal.

Right before I moved away from Los Angeles in late 2000, I read the most interesting story about a woman who went from being unemployed and about to be evicted from her apartment, to becoming a highly sought-after, up-and-coming erotic dominatrix who was earning a six figure salary.

Just about all of her clients, which were about 80-85% men and 15-20% women, paid her good money for her to criticize them, admonish them, insult them, disrespect them, humiliate them and of course, dominate them. Many of her clients were doctors, lawyers, CEOs, corporate executives, police officers, professors and teachers, and involved in other respectable careers. The vast majority of them held positions of authority.

Now, you might be thinking to yourself, "Why would mature, intelligent, college-educated men and women in positions of authority pay a woman CASH MONEY to be treated like shit??"

This woman said, "many men and women with huge egos who are in positions of authority over others, get bored when EVERYONE treats them with a high degree of respect and deference. They find it nice and flattering, but boring*. They find that they need to have at least ONE PERSON in their life who is going to go against the grain and let them know that they aren't all that. That they are really a bitch or an asshole."*

This phenomenon is true with a lot of very attractive women who possess a high degree of sex appeal and popularity with men. Some men say, "Why is that drop-dead gorgeous woman dating that jerk?? He's a verbally abusive asshole!! Why would she date someone who demeans her and treats her like shit??" For the very same reason that this dominatrix talked about. Women with huge egos get bored of men fawning over them all the time, and playing up to their egos without fail.

These types of women find constant flattery enjoyable to their ears (and ego) most of the time, but they want at least ONE GUY in their life who is going to treat them like they are "not all that." Now, do not misquote me. I am not suggesting that all men should go out and treat women like complete crap. I am saying, do not fawn over any woman. Simply treat her "normal."

I can name quite a few times that I successfully seduced some very attractive women by "going against the grain." Not flattering them at all. Not offering to 'wine & dine' them at all. Not calling them every two or three days. I would not say I treated them in any sort of "abusive" manner, but I was very, very cocky and extremely self-assured with them.

Fact: Excessive flattery and fawning behavior is pleasant and enjoyable to a woman's ears and ego, but it rarely, if ever, leads to her getting sexually aroused.

A lot of women will tell you that they "dislike" guys who are 'cocky' and 'full of themselves' and treat women like sex objects. Don't believe that bullshit for one second (unless the woman is a genuine 5 – then her words might be sincere).

A bold, cocky, fearless sense of confidence in a man makes women feel intimidated, intrigued, and egotistically frustrated. Women will feel somewhat uncomfortable, but in a 'good' way.

I never approach a woman with a deferential attitude of "Gee golly! You are SO beautiful!!! I wish I could have just ONE NIGHT with you!! I know it would be the most fantastic night of sex in my entire life!!!! Oh my God, I'm almost about to have an orgasm just thinking about it!!" Yeah, right. Do you think me, or any man, is going to get laid saying stupid shit like that?

There is being respectful to women, and then there is being TOO respectful to women. You never want to be the latter. Never. The vast majority of the time that I approach women with the objective of seducing them, I am bold and cocky as hell.

I talk to women with an underlying attitude of, "I know for a fact that I'm going to fuck you. Whether it be today, tomorrow, next week, next month, next year, or five years from now. I am going to fuck you, and you know you want me to."

A-B-C. Always Be Calm & Cocky. Never talk to a woman like you "hope" to fuck her. Talk to her like it is a foregone conclusion that you are going to have hot, kinky, enjoyable sex, at some point in the (near) future.

Do you know that I can name over a dozen times when I had a woman, right before having intercourse, or right before giving me a blowjob, say to me, "Alan, I hate you. You are such a cocky asshole." You know why they said that to me, even though they were about to provide me with orgasmic pleasure?

None of these women truly 'hated' me or genuinely 'disliked' me. These particular women expressed lighthearted 'hate' for me because when I first approached them, I told them that I knew for a fact that I was going to fuck them.

So, it was very egotistically frustrating for them to see my prediction come true. Now, did I really know for a fact that I was going to have sex with these women? Of course not.

Women always have been, and always will be, the ultimate gatekeepers of sex. They are always the final decision makers, unless again, they are drunk, drugged or being pressured or coerced to have sex. Under normal circumstances, the ball is in their court.

I guarantee you: If you approach a woman, and tell that woman that you "know for a fact that you are going to end up having sex" in a super-confident-bordering-on-cocky manner, and then you do not say ANYTHING else after that, the thought of what you said will linger in that woman's mind for a few hours, a few days, even a few weeks or months. Trust me on that. Cockiness has its rewards.

Do not put a time frame on it. Do not say, "I guarantee you that I will fuck you in the next 48 hours!" Because then if it doesn't happen, that is an 'egotistical victory' for HER. But if you leave that cocky prediction "open ended," with no specific time frame, a woman who has some degree of attraction for you will think about that comment every week, if not every day.

Bold, Cocky Confidence combined with Upfront, Straightforward Honesty is the #1 "X Factor" in seducing women verbally, psychologically and emotionally.

Similarly, you have got to get to a point where harsh criticisms, personal insults, and other people's opinions and perceptions of you, means jack shit. This is when you will be on your way to becoming a powerful "master seducer."

I had a woman tell me this just a few months ago. She said, "Alan … you know what turns me on? I mean, really turns me on? It's when a man has that underlying 'I don't give a fuck what you, your friends, or your mother thinks about me' attitude. That is so fucking sexy in a man*. All of my* girlfriends say that. When a man has an 'I don't give a fuck what you think of me' attitude, you feel compelled to give him some pussy..."

Almost every guy who I have ever been friends with, who happened to be a top-notch ladies' man or womanizer, had that "I don't give a fuck what you think of me" attitude, to one degree or another. Caring too much about what other people think of you is just not sexy at all. It makes you look egotistically insecure and thin-skinned. Not a sexy, appealing trait at all.

Verbal Seduction Rule #6: Never allow yourself to care about the subjective criticisms and personal opinions of others. Always maintain an 'indifferent attitude' toward what others say about you. Always be your OWN MAN.

Think about if you were invited into a room with nine desirable women who had all criticized you to their girlfriends in the past.

Imagine it has been pre-determined that three of the nine women definitely want to have sex with you (but you don't know that yet). Similarly, it has been pre-determined that three of the women are at least partially interested in you, but you would have to be really persuasive and seductive to get these three in bed (but again, you don't know that yet).

And finally, it has been pre-determined that three of the women are definitely NOT interested in sharing your company sexually.

If you enter this room with a BOLD, FEARLESS SENSE OF CONFIDENCE, and genuinely do not give a fuck about the subjective criticisms and personal insults that they have expressed in the past, you will approach ALL NINE WOMEN, and initiate a conversation with them.

At minimum, you will end up having sex with three of those nine women. At maximum, you will end up fucking six of those nine women. The three women who ultimately fail to reciprocate the sexual desires and interests you expressed to them in a highly self-assured, upfront, straightforwardly honest Mode One style will be forgotten about in less than 24 hours.

On the flip side, if you enter that room with a less than average degree of confidence, and you are worried about what each woman thinks of your personality, your clothes, your looks, and your level of education and career success, guess what?

If the very first woman you talk to is one of the three women who is destined to reject you, and does, (after you have bored her to death talking about your sister's dog), your confidence is going to be shot. You will not even stay in that room long enough to be rejected a second or third time. You are going to find yourself feeling defeated by factors that were generally out of your control.

I cannot stress this enough: CONFIDENCE MEANS EVERYTHING. Many times, your level of confidence is literally the razor thin difference between an enthusiastic, reciprocal response from a woman and a bored or highly disinterested response.

Concentrate on taking action and being the man you truly want to be. Express your desires, interests and intentions to women in the exact manner that you ideally want to.

Do not concentrate on the potential "reactions" you might receive in response to your behavior, or the potential "results" you will get (or won't' get) from it. Just focus on what you want from a woman, and how you are going to verbally express that to her. Express all of your sexual desires, interests and intentions with a boat load of powerful CONFIDENCE.

Quick recap thus far:

1) Self-confidence is not something you “have” or “do not have”; It is something you “use” or “fail to use”. Self-confidence is like the psychological equivalent to a muscle. The more you use it, and the more challenges and resistance you provide, the stronger your confidence will become.

2) In order to allow your sense of self-confidence to keep getting stronger and stronger, you must begin to approach women who you find “intimidating.” Always seek to get out of your “comfort zone.”

3) Always trying to make women feel “comfortable” in your presence is not necessarily a good or beneficial thing. In many instances, you actually want women to feel a bit “uncomfortable” in your presence.

You do not want to make women feel uncomfortable in a weird or ‘creepy’ manner, but you do want women to feel intrigued and slightly intimidated by how confident and self-assured you are, in your ability to attract women.

4) Flattery and respect are pleasing to a woman’s ego, but neither necessarily gets her sexually aroused. In order to get women aroused, you have to say something that challenges their ego, and leaves them feeling a bit egotistically frustrated.

5) Always maintain a calm, relaxed, easygoing demeanor and confident direct eye contact while in conversation with women. Avoid shifting your eyes too much, or coming across as nervous, tense, or too aggressive.

6) Allow yourself to get to a point where you genuinely do not care what other people think of you. Indifference toward the criticisms, perceptions and opinions of others enhances your sex appeal, in the eyes of women.

Chapter Four
Sexual Chemistry: The Good, The Bad, and The Unpredictable

Many men and women attempt to describe sexual attraction in very simplistic or highly intellectualized terms.

For example, some men and women think that sexual attraction is 90-99% about physical appearance. Not true (particularly for women). Is sexual attraction specifically based on whether you and a member of the opposite sex attended the same college, or if you are close in age? No. Is sexual chemistry all about a man and a woman being raised by parents who shared the same degree of morals, values, and principles? No.

I conducted a random survey of women from Facebook on SurveyMonkey.com® about what turns them on in men, what turns them off, and what is important to them in a sexual companion. The responses were extremely varied. There were very few characteristics that were unanimously selected.

For example, here are a few characteristics that the women were almost "split" on (i.e., approximately 45-55% of the women surveyed expressed that they were either 'indifferent' toward these personal attributes, or found them unimportant, while the remaining portion ranked these attributes as important to extremely important, as far as a sexual turn-on):

-The length or girth of man's penis
-Looks (Face Only)
-Looks (Physique Only)
-A man's level of academic education
-A man's sense of humor and wit
-A man's level of career success or wealth
-A man's potential to be a good father to his children

There were only four characteristics that came close to being unanimously described as highly desirable, and a big turn-on:

-A man's willingness to spend a good portion of his free time with a woman of interest
-A man's personal grooming and hygiene habits
-Overall level of intelligence and common sense
-Overall level of confidence and conversation skills

One other characteristic that came somewhat close to being unanimous in my survey was "degree of kinkiness." What was interesting about this selection was that even women who described themselves as being somewhat 'prudish' found kinkiness in a man to be a turn-on. Based on some of my experiences with women, this does not surprise me at all.

In a nutshell, different women find very different characteristics in men "sexy." Some women like men with tattoos and earrings, while others absolutely hate these kinds of men. Some women love men who are earning a high five-figure or six-figure income and have a high degree of social status, while other women couldn't care less about that when it comes to being sexually aroused and erotically satisfied.

Here is the only pure "fact" you can say about sexual attraction: If you have the ability to get a man or woman sexually aroused, there is a greater than fifty-percent chance that you can get them to have sex with you – at least once.

Many men "put the cart before the horse" when it comes to women and sex. I hear men talk all the time about their desire to have sex with women, but many of these men never emphasize the concept of sexual arousal and seduction. You can be a professional chef, and prepare the most high quality meal in the world, but if you serve it to a table of people who are not hungry, you have just wasted your time.

Another mistake both men and women make is allowing themselves to remain clueless about the concept of sexual chemistry. Sexual chemistry is everything, and especially if you are thinking of dating someone in a long-term monogamous manner. You absolutely must develop and maintain a high degree of sexual chemistry in order for a marriage or any monogamous relationship to last indefinitely.

Sometimes, you can predict sexual chemistry, and other times, you cannot. If you return to Chapter One and reflect on much of what I wrote in that chapter, you will see that a large part of what turns you on, or has the potential to turn you on, and has the potential to turn you off, or will definitely turn you off, relates to your degree of social programming, and more importantly, how much you adhere to your social programming.

Most men and women have three groups of sexual preferences and tastes: “Normal,” “Kinky,” and “Perverted.” What sexual activities you place in each respective category is going to be very unique and highly subjective to each and every individual in modern society.

I would generally describe “normal” sexual preferences as those activities that even the most religious, prudish and conservative person on earth would deem as “acceptable.” Most of those on the extreme right tend to only condone sex that is for procreation rather than recreation. So, for example, if you are having sex in the missionary position with your husband or wife at 11:00pm in your bedroom, that would be what most people would call “normal” sexual activity.

“Kinky” sex is generally thought of as any form of sex that is more geared toward casual enjoyment and recreation rather than reproduction, particularly if the sex is outside of marriage or a long-term monogamous relationship.

For example, if I were to engage in a ménage-a-trois with two women, most conservative types would probably label me as “kinky,” even though many adult film actors and actresses, or those involved in swinging clubs and polyamorous dating, would consider a threesome as “normal” sexual activity.

“Perverted” sex has traditionally been thought of as sex that is considered “unnatural.” For example, for years, homosexuality was considered ‘perverted.’ In previous centuries, even oral sex and anal sex among heterosexual men and women was widely considered “perverted” and “unnatural.” Why? Because anal sex and oral sex do not have the potential to lead to pregnancy and the reproduction of human beings.

I have dated at least a handful of women in my adult life that were totally against the idea of anal sex or oral sex. They would make comments like, “only perverted people engage in those types of activities.” I rarely debate women on what is ‘normal,’ ‘kinky’ or ‘perverted.’ That is a debate that no two people with different opinions and experiences will ever win.

I love to receive oral sex from a woman. If that makes me a “pervert,” so be it. I have rarely met a man who did not like blowjobs. I think the men in society who are totally against blowjobs would make up less than 1% of the men in society.

How you look at sex is going to play a big part in the development and maintenance of your sexual chemistry, with a chosen partner. If you look at a particular sexual activity as being ‘normal,’ but your partner perceives that same activity as being ‘perverted,’ you two are going to have some issues.

You do not have to be “philosophical twins” with a member of the opposite sex in order to develop sexual chemistry, but you and a potential partner of interest have to be generally on the same page. If you are really turned on by something, and your potential partner is really turned off by that same activity, your sexual chemistry with this person is either going to be short-lived, or worse, non-existent.

In order for there to be sexual chemistry between a man and a woman, there also has to be some sort of “Yin” and “Yang” dynamic. Some refer to this as a “masculine-feminine” dynamic; Others refer to it as a “dominant-submissive” dynamic; A few refer to it as an “aggressive-passive” union.

Whatever philosophy or dynamic you subscribe to, there is a high degree of validity to all of the above-mentioned dynamics, in terms of how your personality and sexual behavior as a man, will mesh with the personality and sexual behavior of a woman.

Generally speaking, if a man and a woman both have very dominant, selfish, aggressive, or “alpha” type personalities, there is a very good chance that these two will not “click” sexually in the long run.

It is a similar case with a man and a woman who are both very passive, compromising, sensitive, or submissive. In that scenario, the woman is usually going to get very bored and crave the sexual companionship of a man who is more ‘alpha’ and dominant in nature.

Here is a huge mistake both men and women tend to make: Just because you ‘like’ someone as an overall person, it does not necessarily mean you and that person will have ‘good’ or ‘great’ sexual chemistry. On the flip side, just because a man or woman has various aspects of their personality and behavior that annoy you, irritate you or frustrate you, it does not mean that you would fail to have good or great sexual chemistry in a short-term or long-term relationship.

I can think of many women who I tend to categorize and perceive as ‘nice’ and ‘sweet’ who I have absolutely no sexual chemistry with whatsoever. On the other hand, I can think of some other women with whom I have interacted from time-to-time who annoy the shit out of me, but ended up having some of the best sex of my life with.

I cannot tell you how many conversations I have had with women where they will express a laundry list of complaints and criticisms of their current boyfriend or husband, but then, when I ask them, "Why are you still with this guy?" they will reluctantly admit that it is because that guy produces multiple g-spot or clitoral orgasms for them in bed.

I had one woman who I conversed with not too long before writing this book say to me, "I cannot stand my ex-boyfriend. He is a complete jerk. But I still let him fuck me, even though he now has another girlfriend, because he is the only guy I've been with (sexually) who knows how to hit my spot in a manner that will always make me squirt. I always cum really, really hard when my ex fucks me. But non-sexually, I cannot stand to be around him. He gets on my last nerves."

I would put all sexual chemistry between heterosexual men and women into three general categories: "Good," "Bad," and "Unpredictable." Let us start with bad sexual chemistry.

Bad Sexual Chemistry

I would divide bad sexual chemistry into two sub-categories: non-existent and abusive/detrimental.

Realistically, no man or woman on this earth is going to have sexual chemistry with each and every member of the opposite sex that they come in contact with. If you are a man, there are some women who will never, ever decide to have sex with you. Do not be delusional.

I laugh out loud when I see "pick up artist" types write and market books that make claims like, "If you read this book, you will be able to seduce ANY woman into bed that you meet! ANY WOMAN! Even women from other countries!" Yeah, right.

I can usually tell within the first ten-to-fifteen minutes after I am in a woman's presence, if that woman and I have no sexual chemistry, low sexual chemistry, medium sexual chemistry or high sexual chemistry. The vast majority of the time, I can just feel it. Sometimes, even before either the woman or I open our mouths.

Anytime you interact with a woman frequently, if she fails to give you nothing more than a boat load of platonic attention, and generally treats you like a "play brother," this means that she feels no sexual chemistry with you. At the least, she feels no sexual chemistry with you right now.

The second type of "bad" sexual chemistry would be when you have a certain degree of sexual chemistry with someone who is just "bad news." For example, you have sexual chemistry with a woman who repeatedly has been arrested for cocaine possession or has a history of neglecting her children. Or you are a woman who feels sexual chemistry with a man who physically, verbally and emotionally abuses you.

Even if these men or women would potentially make you feel excited and satisfied in bed, you should try your best to stay away from them. I am not simply talking about members of the opposite sex who "get on your nerves." I am talking those men and women who will just bring you down as a person, and eventually cause your life to be full of misery and adversity.

Good Sexual Chemistry

Have you ever been around a man or a woman, and they cannot stop looking at you … you cannot stop looking at them … they feel the need to get "touchy-feely" with you … and you return the favor and get "touchy-feely" with them? These are two general signs of good sexual chemistry.

Good sexual chemistry usually comes from a combination of physical attraction, similar interests, a love for each other's personality, and a good "yin yang" feel between you two.

Good sexual chemistry is not complicated. If you love receiving oral sex, and a woman loves giving oral sex, then you two are going to immediately click. If you love to erotically dominate a woman in bed, and she loves to be extremely submissive to her male partner in bed, you will get along perfectly.

Unpredictable Sexual Chemistry

Have you ever observed a woman who was very intelligent and educated with multiple college degrees hooking up sexually with a man who is a high school dropout? Have you ever observed a man who was sort of "geeky" and "nerdy" hooked up with a woman who was sassy, sexy, urban, and street-wise?

If you have not, I have. This is what I refer to as "unpredictable" sexual chemistry. In other words, "on paper," a man and a woman do not look like they would be a good sexual 'match' based on their respective quirks, characteristics and attributes, but when these men and women get together, all sorts of sparks fly between them.

I have seen quite the opposite happen too. Sometimes, I have been introduced to a couple that seemed "perfect" for each other on paper, but later I will find out that this couple has almost zero sexual chemistry, and both partners are cheating on one another. They give off a happy façade in public, but behind closed doors, they are bored to death with one another.

Here is a warning for all men and women reading this book right now: You cannot simply "intellectualize" sexual attraction and sexual chemistry. The desire to have sex with a man or a woman is not a purely intellectual decision. A lot of sexual desire is hormonal, instinctive, and subconscious.

Return to Chapter One where I talk about a woman's willingness to adhere to her "social programming," versus a woman wanting to give in to her raw desires and emotional impulses. Many times, this creates internal conflicts in a woman, and blatant contradictions that leave men confused.

This is why you observe so many women saying, "I want a 'nice guy' as a boyfriend or husband," but then you see that same woman out in a club with either a convicted felon or a man who has a well-known reputation for being an incorrigible womanizer and ladies' man.

This woman's intelligence probably told her that this man is "not the right type" for her, but her innate sense of sensuality and biological instincts connected with this guy on some emotional or subconscious level, and the two 'clicked,' even though 'on paper,' the two seem to be a gross mismatch.

Men and women need to remember and realize: You do not always "choose" who you fall in love with, or who has the potential to get you really horny. Again, romantic or sexual attraction is not solely and specifically based on intellectual factors, such as level of education or common interests.

There are no 100% "for-sure" signs of good, or great, sexual chemistry until you actually have sex with a woman, but there are definitely certain "body language cues" that you can look for in women, either before you converse with them, or during your conversation with them.

Here are some of the body language signs I pay attention to from the time I first see a woman until the time I am fully engaged in a conversation with her:

- The manner in which a woman uses her eyes
- The manner in which a woman walks & moves
- If a woman allows you to "get in her space"
- How she crosses her legs when seated

- If a woman licks her lips a lot
- If a woman becomes “touchy-feely” with you, or at minimum, allows you to become “touchy-feely” with her
- The quality and tone of a woman’s voice while conversing with you

A Woman’s Eyes

There is arguably no single physical feature I pay attention to more on a woman when I go into “seduction mode” than a woman’s eyes. A woman’s eyes tell you just about everything you need to know about a woman. A woman’s eyes are a ‘window’ to her soul, her character, and her innate sensuality.

90% of the time, I can usually tell if a woman is prudish or kinky just by the manner in which she uses her eyes. You can tell if a woman is pretentious or down-to-earth by watching the manner in which she uses her eyes.

Women who love to fuck, and have been fucked really well in their lives tend to naturally use their eyes in a more seductive manner. Women who are virgins, or women who are indifferent toward sexual enjoyment and orgasmic pleasure, tend to have a totally different type of look. For example, women who are virgins tend to have a very “innocent” and “naïve” look in their eyes most of the time.

I rarely approach a woman if she does not give me at least a full two or three seconds of direct eye contact. If a woman only looks at me for a micro-second, and then quickly looks away at someone else or something else, 99% of the time, I do not approach that woman. I tend to assume that she is not interested in having a conversation with me at all.

A woman’s degree of eye contact with you is usually her first “invitation” to you that she wants to converse with you, and see what you are about. Interested women have ‘warm eyes.’

Women who are interested in conversing with you are typically going to either a) give you one long stare of direct eye contact, or b) display a high number of short, quick instances of direct eye contact, which they alternate with looking to the side or looking at the floor. Always look women directly in their eyes.

The Way a Woman Walks and Moves

I remember when I was in college, a friend of mine and I were watching this woman walk across campus, and my friend said, "You can tell that woman loves to be fucked. Just look at the way she walks." There is validity to that comment of his.

Debate this if you choose, but most men I know along with myself agree with this belief: Women who have a high interest in sexual enjoyment and orgasmic pleasure generally carry themselves differently than women who are very prudish, sexually inexperienced, or indifferent toward sex.

There are exceptions here and there, no doubt, but generally speaking, women who are open to meet new men to have sex with tend to walk and move more slowly and smoothly than women who are the more prudish types. Every movement of theirs is feminine, smooth, graceful, and sensual.

A woman who is not interested in conversing with you or having sex with you will typically walk in a hurried manner, or in a "herky jerky" manner. Sometimes, her movements will be more masculine than feminine.

If a Woman Allows You to "Invade Her Space"

Next to eye contact, this characteristic is very, very important. When you move toward a woman, does a woman a) move toward you, b) remain stationary, or c) move away from you?

If the answer is "a" or "b," you are in good shape. If the answer is "c," more than likely, you are in trouble.

Most body language experts usually say that the “three feet range” is the key difference between interest and non-interest. If a woman keeps a distance of more than three feet away from you, this typically means that she is indifferent toward you, or worse, just flat-out not sexually attracted to you.

If a woman allows you to get within a three feet radius of her, this usually means that she has some degree of romantic or sexual attraction toward you. Not always, but usually.

The Manner in which a Woman Crosses Her Legs

I remember years ago, a woman let me in on a little secret. She said, “Alan … when a woman crosses and uncrosses her legs a lot, or rubs her thighs together a lot in your presence, that usually means that she is attracted to you and something about you is making her horny.”

I have to admit: most women with whom I eventually connected romantically or sexually, did tend to cross and uncross their legs or rub their legs together a lot, when in my presence. So there is a lot of truth to what my friend told me.

Women who Lick Their Lips Very Frequently

When near a woman, always pay attention to how active her tongue is. Women who love to kiss typically have very active tongues. Similarly, women who enjoy both intercourse and oral sex tend to have very active tongues, and lick their lips a lot.

I have noticed that when I am in the company of a woman who has very little interest in me romantically or sexually, she very rarely, if ever, allows her tongue to come out of her mouth.

In contrast, when I reflect on most of the women that I ended up dating or engaging in casual sex with, no less than 80-90% of them tended to lick their lips quite frequently.

If you notice, when corporations create an advertising ad that is designed to be sensual and erotically teasing, they usually feature a photo of a woman with her tongue on her upper lip.

A Woman becomes "Touchy-Feely" with You

If you have read my previous paperback, Upfront and Straightforward, I did some lighthearted "bragging" on my keen sense of perception towards being able to read men and women's body language.

There have been times, when I have only observed a couple for 10-15 minutes, and I can immediately tell if one of them is cheating, or if they are going to break up in the near future. Sometimes, my predictions have left some of my friends and acquaintances totally amazed and dumbfounded.

Many of them will ask, "How did you know that [insert man's name here] and [insert woman's name here] were not going to last as a couple? What signs did they give off? I did not see them arguing or anything like that. How did you know?"

A lot of it has to do with the body language characteristics I already spoke of, but the #1 key indicator of a couple with a good relationship versus a less-than-average or on-the-verge-of-breaking-up couple, is how frequently they touch each other. When a couple is truly in love, and have a high degree of sexual passion and chemistry in their relationship, they will not be able to keep their hands off of each other.

Just about every couple I have ever been around who had a really great relationship had the tendency to touch each other a lot, and smooch or kiss a lot. Conversely, just about every couple I have ever been around where the chemistry between them was "average" at best, and at worst, diminishing by the second, the man and woman involved very rarely, if ever, touched or kissed each other.

When you first meet a woman, if she is really attracted to you, she is going to repeatedly touch your head, your face, your shoulders, your chest, your thighs, your hands, or your arms. Sometimes, this will not even be a 'conscious' gesture. She probably will not realize she is doing it, but she will.

Once a woman of interest becomes "touchy-feely" with me, I go into seductive mode almost immediately.

The Quality and Tone of a Woman's Voice

I will probably discuss this characteristic in more detail in the next chapter rather than this chapter, but I quickly say this: Women who have an erotically uninhibited and highly sensuous nature about themselves tend to express themselves verbally more differently than women who are prudish, sexually inexperienced, or indifferent toward sexual enjoyment and orgasmic pleasure. Women who genuinely love to fuck typically have very feminine, seductive voices.

For the first three-to-five minutes that I am speaking with a woman, I pay very close attention to the tone and overall speaking quality of a woman's voice. Many women will let you know just how kinky they are, not so much by the specific words that they use in conversation, but rather, their voice.

When I think of most of the women who I have seduced into having sex with me within 24 hours or less after first making their acquaintance, no less than three-fourths of them were women with very calm, relaxed, highly feminine, seductive voices.

My older brother, Stephen, teases me all the time about my love of and attention to women's voices. He once said to me, "Bro, I notice you analyze women's voices constantly. You are like a connoisseur of women's voices. I would venture to say, you are a voice addict." His lighthearted assessment is valid.

I tend to put the same degree of emphasis on a woman's voice that most men would put on a woman's face or body. One of my fraternity brothers once said, "Alan, you are one of the most auditory brothers I have ever met in my entire life…"

You can learn a lot about a woman's level of eroticism and sexuality by paying close attention to their eyes, the manner in which they move and walk, the manner in which they use their tongues and lips, the manner in which they cross and uncross their legs, the manner in which they touch you or allow you to touch them, and the manner in which they express themselves verbally.

Take time to develop your "sixth sense" of women's body language cues. It will benefit you for sure in the long-run whenever you identify a woman of interest, and ultimately approach them and initiate a conversation with them.

Quick recap thus far:

1) There are very few male characteristics and attributes that are a unanimous “turn on” or “turn off” for the vast majority of women in society. Some women love a very handsome man, while other women are indifferent toward looks; some women love men with long or thick penises, while other women couldn’t care less about penis size. Sexual “Turn Ons” and Sexual “Turn Offs” generally vary from woman to woman.

2) Most men and women tend to put other people’s sexual preferences and activities into three categories: “normal,” “kinky,” and “perverted.”; “normal” sex represents sex within a marriage or a monogamous relationship that will lead to pregnancy and reproduction; “kinky” sex usually represents sex that is short-term, non-monogamous, or recreational in nature; “perverted” sex is generally categorized by many in society as sexual activities that do not have the potential to lead to pregnancy and reproduction. All of these terms and categorizations are highly subjective and can vary in definition from person to person.

3) Developing sexual chemistry with a member of the opposite sex is not entirely or solely an “intellectual” decision; there are many emotional, hormonal, instinctive, and subconscious factors that contribute to who we have powerful, indefinite sexual chemistry with.

4) As a man, if you want to identify new potential female sex partners, you should always pay very close attention to the manner in which a woman moves and walks, how she uses her eyes, her lips, her tongue, her voice, and her hands, how frequently she crosses and uncrosses her legs, among other factors related to her body language.

Women who are interested in having sex with a man usually offer a lot of unconscious, subtle “body language cues.”

Chapter Five
The Hypnotic Effect of Aural Sex: Using the power of words to break through a woman's social programming

In this chapter, I will teach you how to use all of the knowledge and wisdom I have offered you thus far, and also enlighten you on how to use the power of certain words and phrases, and your overall conversational skills, to break down a woman's "psychological gatekeeper," otherwise known as her social programming. I want you to learn how to overcome a woman's justifications for resistance to engage in mutually beneficial sex.

In Chapter One, I taught you that the #1 obstacle that usually stands in between you and a woman's desire to fully reciprocate your sexual desires and interests is her social programming. In Chapter Two, I went on to explain why many women will behave as though they are 'offended' by erotically explicit language, and feel like sexually provocative conversations are 'disrespectful,' even though deep-down, many of these same women may end up feeling very aroused.

Let me make this clear: I am not completely against the idea of social programming. If men and women did not adhere to most of the social norms, rules, laws and guidelines, many members of society would become extremely rebellious, chaos would ensue, and crime would probably increase exponentially. Impulsive behavior could produce harsh or deadly consequences and repercussions for many.

I remember watching a B-movie in which the main plot centered on some sort of foreign substance that infects the food and water of this town. One of the main effects of this substance was that it caused men and women to temporarily or indefinitely ignore their social programming, and give in to their raw desires and emotional impulses.

On the lighthearted side, the characters in the movie were having sex like crazy anytime, anywhere. They just simply did not care. On the harsher side, some men and women were committing murder whenever someone angered them, and the impulse to retaliate in a homicidal manner took over.

In Chapter Two, I also taught you that not all women are equally receptive to the same type of sex. Women who are “5s” frown upon premarital sex, or at minimum, are very disinterested or indifferent toward sexual enjoyment and orgasmic pleasure; women who are “4s” enjoy sex, but prefer to enjoy only within the context of a long-term monogamous “boyfriend-girlfriend” type relationship; women who are “3s” will indulge in casual sex, but are very selective about their casual sex partners; women who are “2s” are very kinky, and love frequent episodes of casual sex, but they also are very sexually duplicitous, and will usually try to present themselves as a “3,” a “4” or a “5.” Finally, women who are “1s” are extremely kinky and even very promiscuous, and they couldn’t care less who criticizes them about it or who passes judgment on them.

(Note: If you are a man reading this, the purpose of this book is to help you with women who are 2s and 3s, or if you are interested in a long-term emotionally profound relationship with a woman, women who are 4s. 99.99% chance that this book will not provide you with any assistance with women who are true 5s, and you really do not need any assistance with women who are 1s; 1s usually will either quickly have sex with you, or they won’t.)

In Chapter Three, I emphasized the importance of bold, fearless confidence, as well as the importance of maintaining confident, direct eye contact with women and learning how to become indifferent toward the opinions, expectations and subjective criticisms and insults of others. I also discussed the idea that sometimes, making a woman feel “comfortable” is highly overrated and even detrimental.

Finally, in Chapter Four, I discussed the fact that most women are very varied and divided in terms of what characteristics in a man turns them on sexually versus what attributes in a man turn them off; I continued by discussing how most men and women in society tend to group all sexual activities into three general categories, which would be “normal,” “kinky,” and “perverted”; I also explained how you cannot over-intellectualize the development of short-term or long-term sexual chemistry; I wrapped up by describing some of the most prominent body language signs that women tend to display when in the company of a man who they are romantically or sexually attracted to.

My primary goal with this chapter is to teach you how you can take all of the knowledge, wisdom and advice from the first four chapters and combine it with the most important, useful, potent tool for verbal seduction:

The erotic power of your voice, your words, and your overall conversational skills.

Have you ever listened to a song, and had that song either get you very hyped and energized, or caused you to become very sad and reflective? How does this happen? I mean, after all, it is just words and music, right?

Have you ever listened to a comedian, and his jokes and humorous stories had you laughing so hard, to the point where your stomach hurt or you were out of breath? How does this happen? I mean, after all, these are just stories using funny words and comedic timing, right?

Have you ever had another man at a bar, or at a party, talk shit to you, and the next second, you were ready to punch this guy in the face? How does this happen? I mean, after all, this man was just expressing antagonistic, inciting words, right?

I think you get the point by now. SOMEONE ELSE'S WORDS CAN HAVE A PROFOUND EFFECT ON OUR BEHAVIOR, OUR THOUGHTS, OUR EMOTIONS, and OUR REACTIONS TO OTHERS.

Do you know I once made a woman reach orgasm not once … not twice … not three times … but SEVEN TIMES in approximately three hours? With the slow, long stroke of my penis during intercourse? Would love to say so … but no. With the wet warmth of my tongue during oral sex? I'm pretty good at providing oral pleasure to women … but no. Believe it or not, with just the power of my words. That's right … phone sex. This represents the amazing power of aural sex.

"Huh? Aural sex? What is aural sex?"

For those not quite familiar with the term, "aural" is to the ear what "verbal" is to the mouth (another term that is similar to 'aural' is the term 'auditory'; the two terms have some minor distinctions in definition and connotation, but most use these terms interchangeably).

For example, if your ex-girlfriend gave you an audiotape of you and her having sex, and listening to that tape caused you to masturbate to the point of orgasm, you would be engaging in a form of aural or auditory sex. Same thing with phone sex.

What is interesting is that I have experienced some kinky scenarios over the phone that I never have face-to-face. For example, I once had phone sex with three attractive sisters in one month.

I once had as many as four women masturbating for me over the phone at the same time (two women were in one room masturbating, one woman was in a different room, and a fourth woman was in yet another room, and they were all on the same phone line) in one conversation. That was very hot and kinky.

I am not highlighting these instances so much to 'brag' as much as I am to point out that when you combine the erotic power of your words, your voice, and your conversational skills with the erotic thoughts and erotic visualizations entertained in a woman's mind, you can cause a woman to become so wet and aroused, that she will either want to a) immediately have [physical] sex with you, or at minimum, b) enjoy an episode of phone sex and self-pleasure (masturbation) with you, to the point of orgasm.

Verbal Seduction Rule #7: No thought, fantasy, or visualization that is created in YOUR mind can ever get a woman more sexually aroused than a thought, fantasy, or visualization that is entertained in HER OWN MIND. Think of your voice as the 'pilot light,' your words as the 'gas,' and a woman's mind and imagination as the 'furnace.'

Just about every woman who I have ever seduced into having physical sex or phone sex with me, it was because of my talent for "talking dirty" and my overall verbal seduction skills that led to my success. The vast majority of my former lovers and former phone sex partners have categorized me as the most verbally erotic man they have ever interacted with.

As mentioned before, my love for talking dirty to women started a few months after I viewed the 1980 adult film classic, appropriately entitled, Talk Dirty to Me. Two or three years later, they made a sequel entitled, Talk Dirty to Me, Part II. The late adult film star, John Leslie, starred as a slacker womanizer named "Jack" who had a knack for getting women into bed – many times, within the same day after he first made their acquaintance – by being bold, provocative, ultra-confident, and erotically explicit with his words in his conversations with the women he encountered in the two films.

What I basically did was emulate Jack's body language, his conversational style, his attitude and demeanor, and his boldness and straightforward honesty with women in real life.

Sure enough, to my pleasant surprise, I started experiencing a lot of the same type of quick and mind blowing seductions in real life that the fictional character of Jack experienced within the context of that film.

There were times when I would meet a woman, at say, 8:00 PM, and by 8:30 PM, that new female acquaintance would be giving me a blowjob or we would be engaging in intercourse.

Probably the more interesting and egotistically satisfying seductions were those when I would meet a woman, exhibit Mode One Behavior, talk dirty to her, and initially, that particular woman would have a very adverse and seemingly "angry" response and reaction. To someone who was an eye-witness, it would look like I got rejected in a harsh and abrupt manner. Some friends would say, "You crashed and burned!"

Then, in many, many instances, something interesting would happen. A good number of those same women who initially rejected me, would end up getting back in contact with me. Sometimes, it would be days later, other times it would be weeks later, and in some instances, months or even over a year later. Sure enough, we would end up having sex.

This fascinated me.

When I approached women in a more basic, conventional, non-provocative manner (i.e., Mode Two Behavior), I rarely had a woman have a "change of heart" regarding her romantic or sexual interest in me. If a woman was interested, she reciprocated. If a woman was not interested, she rejected me.

With Mode One interactions, it was different. So, I would ask women (sometimes, while we were in the act of sex), "why did you act like a cold-hearted prude toward me when I first approached you, only to turn around and call me two weeks later? You said that my 'XXX-rated dirty talk' was 'crass' and 'disrespectful.' Why the change in attitude??"

Different women had different responses, but the vast majority of them expressed the same sentiments simply using slightly different words. One woman who I had sex with who had initially rejected me said, "well, when you approached me … and started talking to me in an X-rated, sexually provocative manner, it made me think that you assumed I was a 'slut' or a some sort of 'skanky whore,' and that turned me off. But at the risk of contradicting myself, your words also turned me on*. I have never had a man be bold enough to talk to me like that. I found myself later intrigued by your confidence and audacity."*

When I spoke in London in November 2010, I told the men in the audience about a time when I approached a woman, exhibited Mode One Behavior, and used a lot of X-rated and XXX-rated language with her. At the time, she harshly criticized me. This woman called me a "jerk" and an "asshole."

Guess what I found out a few days later from one of her girlfriends, who was a friend of mine? This same woman who insulted me actually masturbated later on that night thinking about how I approached her. Very little surprises me with Mode One, but at the time, that surprised me a bit. I was like, "Get the fuck out of here … are you serious??" My female friend was like, "Yep. She told me the other day. She said you got her so hot and so wet with your bold talk and X-rated language that she played with herself later on that night."

Behavior like this is exactly why many men scratch their heads, and offer comments like, "Women are so damn confusing. They exhibit so much behavior that is hypocritical, inconsistent, and blatantly contradictory. I can never figure women out."

Well, fellas, I get women. I am not going to suggest that I have a valid explanation for EVERY aspect of women's behavior (because trust me, they leave me confused or frustrated at times too), but I understand most of their behavior as it relates to sex and seduction.

A lot of it goes back to what I talked about in Chapter One and Chapter Two. Women are not naturally turned off by sexually provocative conversations with men that include erotically explicit language. They have been socially conditioned and brainwashed to be "turned off" by such conversations.

There is a difference between the two. A huge difference.

There is a big difference between me having a natural dislike for cookies and ice cream, and me having a group of physicians and nutrition & fitness experts brainwashing me and programming my mind over a period of days, weeks, months or years to believe that cookies and ice cream are going to lead to obesity and diabetes.

There are many women who have been brainwashed to believe that their vagina, and their sexual companionship, is a form of "currency," like money. Many mothers and fathers teach their daughters that "if a man is not offering to take care of you financially, and he is not willing to sacrifice having sex with other women in order to be with you, then he is not a desirable man to be with sexually. Not at all."

Many women in society follow this advice, and adhere to this brand of social programming. Some women take that advice a step further, and ultimately become social climbers and gold diggers. They end up essentially offering their romantic or sexual companionship to a man of status and means. Similar to a Call Girl or Erotic Escort, they are looking to exchange their sexual companionship for financial security and favors at the highest market value they can.

In the instances where the women do not trade sex for money, they trade it for a man's expressed commitment to monogamy. "If you stop fucking other women, I will let you fuck me" is the underlying attitude of a lot of women.

One problem: A woman's raw desires and emotional impulses do not always cooperate with a woman's brainwashing, her learned behavior, and her social programming. Women can be just as impulsive as men.

Why do you think most diets fail? You can read book after book after book that says, "ice cream and cookies will make you fat! Ice cream and cookies will lead to high cholesterol! Ice cream and cookies will lead to diabetes!!" The bottom line is, if your subconscious mind has already experienced the enjoyment of ice cream and cookies, and it associates that experience with pleasure, guess what? There is an 80-90% chance that you are going to give in to the temptation of eating your favorite ice cream and your favorite cookies.

Again, I am not a licensed psychologist, but I know a little something about how the mind works.

Your CONSCIOUS MIND:

The "Gatekeeper" of your mind. This is the headquarters for all of your learned behavior and your social programming.

The conscious part of your mind evaluates behavior and experiences from the perspective of "right vs. wrong," "legal vs. illegal," "appropriate vs. inappropriate," "ethical vs. unethical," "healthy vs. unhealthy," "safe vs. dangerous," etc.

At any time if you give a lot of thought to doing something before you actually do it, you are using your conscious mind. Your conscious mind tends to always weigh the "pros" and "cons" of your actions prior to you exhibiting most forms of behavior.

Your SUBCONSCIOUS MIND:

The “Autopilot” portion of your mind. This is the home for all of your raw desires, emotional impulses, and ingrained habits.

The subconscious part of your mind evaluates behavior and experiences from the perspective of “pleasurable vs. painful,” “exciting vs. boring,” “satisfying vs. frustrating,” “enjoyable vs. tedious,” “quick & easy vs. long & strenuous,” and so on.

The easiest decisions you will ever make in your life as a human being, will be those decisions where your conscious mind and subconscious mind are on the same page.

If your conscious mind says, “That decision is the RIGHT THING TO DO,” and your subconscious mind says, “That decision is going to result in ENJOYMENT and PLEASURE,” that is when you are going to make a decision without much thought. Similarly, if your conscious mind says, “What you are about to do is UNETHICAL,” and your subconscious mind says, “What you about to do is going to result in a lot of PAIN,” then you are going to easily avoid the activity in question.

The tricky decisions happen when your conscious and your subconscious mind “clash.” When a form of behavior is the “right thing to do,” but that behavior is going to result in boredom or frustration. When an activity will provide you with pleasure, but it will also make you feel like you did something “inappropriate” that will cause others to admonish you.

I alluded to this in Chapter One and Chapter Two, but I will reiterate it again: The vast majority of women in society are “sexually conflicted.” On one end, their conscious mind and social programming is telling them to avoid any form of sex that will potentially result in shame, criticism, regret, unwanted pregnancies or a sexually transmitted disease.

Conversely, a woman's subconscious mind could give two flying fucks about all of the above-mentioned bullshit. All it cares about is, "is having sex with this man going to be enjoyable, pleasurable, and full of satisfying orgasms?"

Think about it. When have you ever found yourself gravitating toward a form of behavior, an activity, or an experience that you perceived as "boring," "tedious," "frustrating," or "painful?" Very rarely, if ever.

The Self-Help Guru, Tony Robbins, talks in more detail about this in a few of his books. Robbins says (paraphrasing) that one of the reasons why men and women have a set of "good habits" and "bad habits" is because most of their bad habits are ingrained in their subconscious mind, and their bad habits are subconsciously associated with some degree of enjoyment, pleasure, and satisfaction.

Going back to my ice cream and cookies analogy, you don't eat ice cream and cookies because these food items are healthy and full of helpful nutrition. You eat ice cream and cookies because those food items taste good and provide your taste buds with pleasure.

There are only about four types of women who are going to be genuinely turned off by you attempting to engage them in a sexually provocative and erotically explicit conversation:

-Women who have never had sex before (virgins)
-Women who have had a "bad" sexual experience
-Women who are firm lesbians or just flat-out not attracted to you
-Women who are major, top-tier gold digger types

If a woman has experienced sexual pleasure and satisfaction before, and her number of enjoyable experiences far outweigh her not-so-enjoyable experiences, and she has at least a small degree of attraction to you, then you can get her wet using the power of verbal seduction and aural sex.

You take phone sex. Most women who have listened to my adult-themed podcast program, The Erotic Conversationalist, have heard me discuss some of my phone sex experiences with women. I have rarely had a woman reject my attempt to engage her in a sexually provocative or erotically explicit conversation over the phone. Rarely.

I would estimate that no less than 17 out of every 20 women who I have attempted to get them enthusiastically involved in a sexually provocative conversation over the phone, and open up to me about their sexual desires, preferences, experiences and fantasies, have usually complied. And I would say no less than 12 out of those 17 women ended up masturbating to the point of orgasm before the end of the phone conversation.

Believe it or not, when I was in my mid-to-late 20s, I actually hated phone sex. I had called a few of the advertised "1-900" type phone sex lines, but all of the women sounded corny, phony and scripted. They all sounded like really bad, untalented, B-movie actresses.

The first time I really started getting aroused by phone sex was around 1992 or 1993. An ex-girlfriend of mine got me into it because of the distance between us. We would spend hours on the phone reminiscing about our past episodes of hot, kinky sex, and toward the end of each phone conversation we would almost always end up masturbating to the point of orgasm.

At first, I thought I would only have the power to get women wet who I knew personally, and had already had sex with. Man, did I underestimate myself. Soon, I would meet and talk to a woman once, face-to-face, and then during our first or second phone conversation over the phone, I would have them masturbating to the point of orgasm. Slowly, but surely, I started to fully understand the power of my words and voice.

Don't get me wrong, I love intercourse as much as any man walking the earth, but I have probably learned more about women's sensuality from my episodes of phone sex than I have from most of my physical sex encounters. I have definitely learned more about what it takes to verbally seduce women and get them to the highest point of sexual arousal.

What are some of the things that I have learned about women from my many phone sex conversations?

- Many women feel "pressured" by friends, family, and society in general to behave like an "innocent, wholesome, semi-prudish good girl"; The reality is, many women want to experience wild kinky sex – at least a handful of times – as much as men do
- Many women get into long-term monogamous relationships or get married so they can "unleash" their kinky side, but many of their romantic companions and spouses do just the opposite (many women have told me that a lot of their ex-boyfriends and ex-husbands were boring prudes in bed or uninterested in sex)
- Even women who love feeling powerful and domineering in their careers or other organizations want to become very submissive to men in bed, and want to be erotically dominated
- A lot of women have said that many men who were the most well endowed were some of their worst sex partners, and on the flip side, many of the men who had average to slightly-above-average penises were some of their best lovers
- Many women think about engaging in a MFF threesome or male-female-male threesome just as much as, or more, than many men do
- When it comes to sexual arousal, most men are like microwave ovens and most women are like crock pots; Women love men who are patient enough and take time to really make sure that women reach their highest point of arousal prior to engaging in intercourse

• Many women feel like they put forth much more effort to learn and understand what pleases a man sexually than vice versa; a high number of women look at the majority of men as "selfish lovers," which results in them being unsatisfied in bed (which is why many women depend on vibrators, dildos, and other masturbation-oriented sex toys for sexual satisfaction)

•Most women do not mind sharing a man with another woman, and engaging in casual sex, if a man is upfront and straightforwardly honest about his intentions from the get-go; women hate men who make them feel like a "girlfriend," and take time to develop an "emotional bond," when those men really just want short-term or non-monogamous (casual) sex

•More women have had at least one bisexual experience with another woman than most men think, and maintain many bisexual thoughts, desires, and fantasies

•As I alluded to in an earlier chapter, many women have experienced some of their wildest, kinkiest, freakiest sex with men who were "strangers" and/or new acquaintances rather than with spouses, boyfriends and long-term, familiar partners

This list of tidbits could go on. In a nutshell, I have simply learned that in some ways, women are just like men when it comes to what arouses them sexually, but in other areas related to sex, women are 180 degrees different to men.

One thing I have learned for sure is that very few women are "genuine prudes" behind closed doors. I said that at the beginning of this book. The true "5s" in society are rare. Most women who I have met and conversed with are 2s, 3s, and 4s.

The vast majority of women I have met and conversed with are open-minded, free-spirited, and erotically uninhibited to one degree or another, but because of their fear of being labeled a 'ho,' a 'slut,' or a 'kinky promiscuous freak,' many women keep their more kinky side under wraps until they hook up with a man they completely trust not to pass judgment on them.

How can you learn how to break through women's disingenuous prudish façades? How can you learn how to improve your use of certain words and phrases with women in a manner that will create powerful erotic thoughts and visualizations in their minds? Take heed of my next few tips.

Take time to develop a calm, relaxed, smooth voice

Do you own a small digital recorder? If you do, great. If you do not, go out and invest in one. Then, just simply start recording yourself talking. Pretend like you are approaching a woman for the first time and initiating a conversation with her.

Play it back for yourself. How do you think you sound? Does your voice sound "choppy?" "nervous?" "non-confident?" "effeminate?" "tense or stressed?" If any of the aforementioned adjectives are a valid description of your voice, then this means the tone and overall quality of your voice needs improvement.

This is going to seem like a "weird" suggestion, but I want you to watch a really, really good porno movie. One that really gets you aroused. Start masturbating. Now – once you are at your highest point of arousal – go grab your digital recorder. Start recording yourself. Once again, pretend like you are approaching a woman and initiating a conversation with her.

Play it back for yourself. Do you notice any difference? I would bet money that you are going to notice a difference between your "masturbatory voice" and your "non-masturbatory" voice. You will sound more relaxed.

Not into porno movies or masturbation? Here is an alternative method. Think about a really kinky sexual fantasy or really kinky sexual experience from your past. Minutes into thinking about either one, say to yourself, "Ooooooooooh.'

Say that word in a very calm, relaxed, low volume voice. Keep saying that one word over and over and over again at a volume that is just above a whisper. "Ooooooooooooh."

Over a period of days, weeks, and months, your voice is going to become more smooth and seductive. This will be the first tool in your arsenal toward verbal seduction.

A calm, relaxed, smooth and seductive voice leads to a high degree of persuasive influence with women.

Just about every woman with whom I have had enjoyable phone sex with, and also most of the women with whom I have had enjoyable physical sex with, told me that my voice was the #1 quality about me that got them sexually aroused.

There have been at least a dozen times when I even had a woman either masturbating, or on the verge of masturbating, during a first-time business call.

I remember once, in the late 1990s, I had a woman call me from a temporary employment agency, and in the middle of the conversation, she said, "I feel embarrassed saying this Mr. Currie … but you have a really nice phone voice." Normally, I would just say, "Thank you," and continue the conversation.

With her, I said, "I bet your pussy is getting wet listening to my voice … isn't it …" She said, "Oh my God!! I don't believe you said that!!!" (I get that response a lot from women – "I can't believe you just said that!")

Sure enough, about 10-15 minutes later, I had this woman fingering herself at work in her office. I had never even met this woman in person. What does that experience tell you?

A woman does not necessarily even need to know what you look like in order to become sexually aroused by your words, your voice, and your overall conversational skills.

I could have been a man who was 4'11" who weighed 400 lbs. with gross-looking warts all over my body for all she knew. I did not end up meeting this woman face-to-face until after we had enjoyed three or four episodes of hot phone sex.

Your voice, if you develop and train it correctly, can become a very powerful force in your goal to verbally seduce women.

Instead of watching porn, take time to read some hot erotic fiction or erotic non-fiction written by heterosexual and bisexual women

Most women know what turns other women on, just like most men know what turns other men on. If you notice, most hardcore video porn is written and produced by men. Men know what other men want to see.

Also, if you notice, half of the women who watch porn that is written and produced by men are not necessarily turned on by that particular brand of porn.

A good number of women love erotica novels and erotic non-fiction much more than they do video porn. Women do not need to see sexual activity "acted out" in order to get turned on. They can use the power of their own imagination to get themselves wet. All they need is for a writer to throw a thought or a creative erotic premise into their head, and their mind is off and running. Statistics show: hardcore erotica and erotic romance novels is one of the top genres of books that has experienced the most significant increases in sales over the last 10-15 years (USA Today Newspaper – February 20, 2006).

In the mid-to-late 90s, when I lived in Los Angeles, I actually used to write short erotic fiction and sexual fantasies for women. Over half of the time, I got paid to do it (not much – usually anywhere from $25 - $40 per fantasy).

I had always been a fan of the Letters to Penthouse series, which is a popular book series of erotic fiction based on real-life sexual experiences. Some of the stories would get me so aroused, that I would usually end up masturbating to many of them. Many of the stories were written by women.

What are some of the differences between erotic stories that turn on women versus porn videos that turn on men?

- Women, generally speaking, are much more into foreplay than men are. Men want to watch sex that “gets right into the action.” They want to see a man immediately stick his dick right into a woman’s mouth or vagina; Women want there to be a lot of kissing, caressing, massaging, touching, etc, prior to intercourse. Women are much more into viewing or reading about the “arousal phase” of sex than the average man.

- With most men, the focus is on the orgasm. For most men, the orgasm is the cake. For most women, the orgasm is the frosting on the cake. Women actually like to enjoy every minute of the actual act of sex with a man who turns them on.

- Men, generally speaking, are more voyeuristic; Women, generally speaking, are more exhibitionistic.

- Women get turned on by a lot of “little things” that the average man would not pay attention to. Men just want to see nice tits and a nice firm butt. Women will get turned on by the way a man uses his hands, the way he uses his mouth, lips, and tongue, the way he pulls her hair during sex, etc.

- Most erotic stories that are written for women by women that involve group sex (three or more partners) usually involve “strangers” or new acquaintances. Women do not fantasize too much about group sex with a long-term lover or spouse

- Here is a very important thing: even when women are allowing themselves to indulge in sexual acts that are extremely kinky and adventurous, they still want to be treated in the long run like a complete human being. Very few, if any women, like to be treated like the human equivalent to one of those cheesy-looking plastic blow up sex dolls.

Now don't get me wrong – there are a lot of women who like the exact same type of XXX-rated hardcore video porn that men do, particularly in the 21st Century. A lot of what a woman likes in erotica and video porn, or doesn't like, depends on if she is a "1," "2," "3," "4," or "5."

Many women who are 1s, 2s and 3s love hardcore XXX-rated porn just as much or more than men.

Instead of worrying about "coming on too strong" or worrying about "crossing the line," just concentrate on being bold, confident, straightforwardly honest, and verbally erotic

If there is one thing that mildly bothers me about some of my male Mode One fans and readers is their over-concern about being perceived as "crass," "disrespectful," "rude," or "coming on too strong" with women.

If you think about anything in life, you are going to find men and women who LOVE something, and men and women who CRITICIZE or HATE that same thing.

Let's start with the concept of GOD. Many human beings love and worship GOD, but you have a good number of human beings who criticize the concept of worshiping a "God." Comedian Bill Maher is always poking fun at what he refers to as "religious types." Some people are atheists or agnostic.

Vegetarianism and meat-eating. Some men and women love and swear by the vegetarian lifestyle and the lifestyle of a raw foods vegan, while others think vegetarians are crazy, fanatical animal lovers.

Some people love sports, but I have met men and women who literally hate the idea of athletic competition. Some think competition of any sort, athletics, academics, performing arts, etc., brings out the worst in people instead of their best.

My point? Just about anything you do or say is going to be liked or loved by some, and criticized or disliked or hated by others. This goes back to my advice in Chapter Three about learning to become indifferent toward the opinions, criticisms and expectations of others.

I'll give you one example. I had a female author on my talk radio podcast program, and we got into a lighthearted debate and discussion about men talking dirty to women. More specifically, about men talking dirty to women in the very first conversation after making each other's acquaintance.

This woman said that it was totally inappropriate and disrespectful for a man to talk dirty to a woman he just met. I told her that I have talked dirty to many women in my first conversation with them, both in-person and over the phone.

This same author asked me had I ever been slapped in the face for being so "crass" and "disrespectful" by talking to women about subject matter such as blowjobs in my very first conversation with them. I said, "No, I have not. I have never been slapped by a woman for taking dirty to them, or talking about getting my dick sucked in the first conversation." She said, "you need to be." I got offended, and gave her a piece of my mind. For at least five minutes or so, our exchange became very argumentative and contentious.

Interesting enough, her fellow female friend and co-author who I also interviewed was damn near just the opposite. She had no problem with the idea of me talking dirty to a woman in the first conversation, and talking about blowjobs, as long as the woman who I was conversing with was open to it. Matter of fact, I was talking dirty to HER in our first phone conversation.

I had a number of my female listeners write me. One regular female listener of mine said, "I would love for a man to talk about sex with me in the first conversation, if having sex with me is the #1 thing on his mind. I would rather him get to the point, and skip the phony bullshit, than to talk to me about a bunch of crap that I don't care about. Either I'm going to sleep with him or I'm not."

YOU CANNOT PLEASE EVERYONE. DON'T EVEN DARE ATTEMPT TO.

I am always going to be verbally erotic with women. Always. If some of them don't like it, I don't give a fuck. The only time I am "cautious" about my language is when I am in a professional, "9-to-5" office type situation. And that is only because of the many sexual harassment laws in place.

Many people say that a woman's first impression of you is everything. Well, if it is, I want a woman's first impression of me to be that I love to fuck and I want to make her cum.

I don't want a woman to say, "Alan Roger Currie is so funny!" "Alan Roger Currie is so intelligent and articulate!" "Alan Roger Currie loves dogs!" "Alan Roger Currie cares about family!" Fuck all that. All of those perceptions are true and valid, but that is not what I want my lasting impression to be.

I want a woman to say, "Alan is so nasty. I can tell just by my first conversation with him that he will be kinky in bed. He is a for sure freak!" That is the impression I want a woman to have of me, assuming that I want to have sex with her.

Trust me when I say this: I can name plenty more times when talking dirty to women in my first conversation with them has HELPED ME seduce a woman into having sex with me than I can name times when being verbally erotic with a woman in the first conversation PREVENTED ME from seducing a woman into having either physical sex or phone sex with me.

To take it a step further, just about every woman who I have interacted with who I was interested in having sex with, but they ended up treating me like nothing more than a “platonic friend” or “play brother” were women who I “held back” on being verbally erotic in my first few conversations with them.

Instead, I ended up conversing with these women in a very basic, conservative, and conventional manner. And in almost each instance, I felt regretful and frustrated later on.

When you talk dirty to women, you tend to find out what category they are in much quicker than when you do not engage them in a sexually provocative conversation. Go back to page 14, page 23, and pages 38-46. Exhibiting Mode One Behavior toward women has allowed me to quickly see if a woman was either a Reciprocator, Rejecter, Pretender, or Timewaster as well as if a woman was a 1, 2, 3, 4, or 5.

You can tell a lot about a woman by the manner in which she responds and reacts to your erotic dirty talk. For example, I can usually tell if a woman is a “true 5” or if a woman is really a “2 pretending to be a 5,” just by how she responds to my erotic dirty talk.

Women who are 2s “pretending” to be 4s and 5s are the primary women who will usually get very theatrical and frustrated when you are Mode One with them and talk dirty to them. Why? Deep-down, they feel like you have ‘exposed’ their disingenuous façade, and this very much leaves them feeling frustrated. No woman (or man) who is putting on a public façade wants that easily exposed by others.

Learn to eliminate most of your invalid stereotypes and personal judgments of women

Over the last 5-10 years, I have noticed that a lot of men I interact with and offer advice to tend to shoot themselves in the foot and hurt their own seduction efforts by falling victim to their own invalid beliefs and stereotypes or personal, self-righteous judgments of women.

Quick example: There are many men who tend to believe that if a woman attends church regularly or semi-regularly that she is a “prudish, ultra-monogamous good girl” and if a woman frequents bars and nightclubs on a regular or semi-regular basis, this must mean that she is kinky, into casual sex, and semi-promiscuous. That thinking is such bullshit.

I would say since my early-to-mid 20s, I have had more sex, and particularly casual sex, with women who were regular churchgoers than those who frequented dance clubs or local bars and other social venues. Some women who I have had sex with rarely, if ever, go to nightclubs or bars. Many of the women I have had sex with do not consume any liquor.

Truthfully, nightclubs and bars are actually two of the WORST places to meet women who are interested in having sex. I know more married women, and women who are just looking for flattering attention, who frequent nightclubs than I do women who are actually interested in exchanging orgasms.

Just about every time I have been to a nightclub in cities like Chicago, Los Angeles, or New York, the vast majority of women there were women just looking to have a few drinks, socialize with their girlfriends, or see if they could find a man to offer to ‘wine and dine’ them and shower them with egotistically satisfying compliments and attention. Not my type of woman.

If I had to identify a handful of places where I have had the most success meeting women who I eventually ended up having sex with, here would be my personal Top Five places:

1) College Campuses

Not everyone attends college, or some have already graduated, but if you are between 17 and 25 or older, and you are currently on a college campus, you should have more than enough women to choose from to have enjoyable sex with

2) Social Networking Sites / Internet

I have a friend who goes by the nickname/pseudonym Rico a.k.a. Your Royal Flyness, and he actually has two or three books on the market that deal specifically with connecting with women that you first meet on Facebook, LinkedIn, MySpace, or Twitter; I have had physical sex or phone sex with many women who I first met via the internet. Another online venue that is rising in popularity is Meetup.com; Many singles groups exist in various cities in the US, Canada and Europe

3) Grocery stores

I have seduced a good number of women who I first met in a grocery store. All lonely, horny women need to eat. Lonely women usually do a lot of grocery shopping on Friday and Saturday evenings

4) Health & Fitness gyms

By far one of the best public venues to meet attractive women who emphasize health and fitness. Women usually outnumber men in fitness gyms 2-1 or even 3-1

5) Bookstores

Comment: Because of sites like Amazon.com, many bookstores are now going out of business (sad, but true). Before this happened, I used to connect with many women who I met at Barnes & Noble or Borders

Everyone has heard the old adage, “Don’t judge a book by its cover.” Some men make the mistake of just LOOKING AT a woman, and saying to themselves, “Oh, she’s probably a prude…” or “She is so gorgeous, I bet she already has dozens of men competing for her attention and companionship…” Stop doing this.

At least half of the time you try to predict women’s sexuality or love life just by looking at them, you are going to be wrong. Just because a woman is dressed conservatively does not necessarily means that she is a prude, and just because a woman is drop-dead gorgeous does not mean she is already taken or already married or involved with someone.

There have been a number of women I have met in the past who I initially thought may be prudish, but these women ended up being really, really kinky. Similarly, there have been a number of women who I thought were already receiving a lot of attention from men only to find out they were lonely, bored and looking for male companionship. You just never know until you initiate a conversation with them and get to know them.

Allow some women to focus on men other than YOU

Some men reading this are like, "Huh?" I am going to let you in on a little secret: Some women have a hard time getting excited about the idea of having sex with you if they have never had sex with you. Particularly, if they do not feel a high degree of sexual chemistry with you while in your presence.

There have been at least a handful of times when I have gotten a woman sexually aroused by allowing her to reminisce on a past sexual experience she had with ANOTHER MAN (or woman). Why should I try to force a woman to think about giving me a blowjob, if that woman is fascinated with Brad Pitt? I would rather a woman suck my dick while playing with her clit, fantasizing about sucking Brad's dick, than for her not to suck my dick at all.

I can think of at least one or two physical sex partners I have had, and at least four or five phone sex partners who I have had, where we used this arousal method to get off. I refer to it as "verbal voyeurism" and "verbal exhibitionism."

I had sex with one woman where we rarely talked about each other during sex. She would talk about past boyfriends she enjoyed having sex with, and I would talk about female lovers from my past. Some would call that 'weird,' but the bottom line is, she and I were the two who were having sex and experiencing orgasms, not the others who we talked about.

Sometimes, I actually get hornier when a woman puts my ego in a position of envy or jealousy. I remember one evening, I was in bed with a woman, but had no interest in being sexual. Then, this woman started talking about a sex scene between the actor Wesley Snipes and actress Cynda Williams from Spike Lee's film, Mo' Better Blues. She said, "I bet if Wesley was here right now, he would fuck me silly."

Next thing I know, my dick was hard as a rock. We ended up enjoying some of the best sex we ever had (Later, she giggled and said, "If you're going to fuck me like that when I talk about other guys, I'm going to talk about fucking other men ALL the time to get you hard – You have never fucked me like that before!!).

The same technique works in reverse. I can name many times I have caused a woman to get sexually aroused by allowing her to listen to me talk about seducing and fucking other women. Matter of fact, I would say that at least one out of every five women who I have had sex with, I used "verbal exhibitionism" as a means of getting these women aroused.

Most women will not admit it publicly, but I have met many women who loved hearing stories about me seducing and fucking other women. I have had a lot of women confess to me that this is a HUGE turn-on for them.

Some men think women are going to get "angry" and "jealous" (and, there probably are a handful of women who will), but most will get really, really aroused thinking about you having hot, kinky sex with other women from your past.

Bottom line: If the choice is between getting a woman aroused by talking about sex between you and her, or talking about sex with other women or allowing her to discuss sex with other men (or other women), obviously, go with the former. But if the choice is between the latter, or her not getting aroused at all, then go with "verbal voyeurism /verbal exhibitionism."

In order to get women really, really turned on, you have to be willing to RISK turning them off

It has been my experience that you will never get a woman really turned on by being "safe" or "cautious" with your words and conversation. You have to be provocative. You have to be willing to test the boundaries of a woman's sensuality and sensibilities. This is where your bold confidence comes in.

Comedian and television host Bill Maher said once, "in order to get the crowd to laugh their hardest, you must be willing to play in that area that represents the thin line between 'good taste' and 'bad taste.' You have to at least know where that line is." Comedian Dave Chappelle made a similar comment during an interview on Inside the Actor's Studio.

The same concept holds true with sex and seduction. Just about every time that I had a woman so aroused to the point where she was dripping wet, it was when my conversation was so provocative and erotically explicit to the point of almost being 'rude,' 'offensive,' 'vulgar,' or 'disrespectful.' Almost.

Returning to my discussion about a woman's conscious mind (social programming) and her subconscious mind (raw desires/emotional impulses/ingrained habits), there are generally three types of responses you are going to receive from a woman. I rank them from least aroused to most aroused:

When a woman is going to be the LEAST AROUSED by your sexual conversation with her:

When you are discussing a sexual activity or an aspect of sexual intimacy that both her CONSCIOUS MIND and her

SUBCONSCIOUS MIND perceives as “boring,” “improper,” “unsatisfying,” “immoral,” “painful.”

When a woman is going to be MODERATELY AROUSED by your sexual conversation with her:

When you are discussing a sexual activity or an aspect of sexual intimacy that both her CONSCIOUS MIND and her SUBCONSCIOUS MIND perceives as “enjoyable,” “acceptable,” “satisfying,” “conventional”

When a woman is going to be the MOST AROUSED by your sexual conversation with her:

When you are discussing a sexual activity or an aspect of sexual intimacy that causes her CONSCIOUS MIND to “clash” with her SUBCONSCIOUS MIND; for example, her conscious mind says, “You should not be thinking about this activity – it is too kinky,” but her subconscious mind is saying, “go ahead and engage in that activity because your orgasm will be SO powerful and satisfying!”

Anytime you create a “I should maintain my ‘good girl’ respectability” VS “I want to let loose and reveal my ‘bad girl’ inner kinky freak side” INTERNAL CONFLICT in a woman’s mind, you are going to get that woman really, really wet.

Erotic tension must be present for a woman to get really aroused. And there is no better way to create erotic tension than by creating a high degree of internal conflict between a woman’s conscious mind and her subconscious mind.

Men do not really experience the same “good boy” vs. “bad boy” internal conflict dynamic in relation to sex in the same manner that most women have the “good girl” vs. “naughty girl” internal conflict dynamic.

Society usually gives men a “pass” as far as being kinky and promiscuous, especially when men are young (although men get criticized just as much as, if not more than women for cheating: just ask legendary golfer, Tiger Woods)

Now obviously, you cannot approach a woman you do not know and accurately "predict" what is going to turn her on for sure or turn her off for sure. What is the next alternative plan?

Approach the conversation with the confident assumption that everything that turns you on is going to turn her on.

For the most part, this is a "win-win" situation. If you assume that a woman is turned on by everything that turns you on, and you're right, there is a 99% chance that the sexual chemistry between you two is going to be fantastic.

If you assume that a woman is turned on by everything that turns you on, and you are wrong, then you save yourself a lot of time that you would have invested pursuing a woman who has very few of the same sexual desires and interests that you do. Either way, you "win."

I have had a number of my consultation clients write me and share stories of them having a ménage-a-trois with a woman and one of her girlfriends simply by following the "confident assumption" philosophy.

Very few women are just going to walk up to you and say, "Hey! My name is Jessica, what is your name? Do you want to have kinky sex with me and my girlfriend this weekend?" There is a 99.9% chance that is not going to happen. And if it does, "Jessica" is going to charge you money.

You have to confidently assume that the women you approach and converse with are just as kinky, if not kinkier, than you are. Get that 'internal conflict' going in their heads. I love to see the erotic tension between a woman and myself escalate to the highest degree possible.

You should try your best to avoid assuming that anything about sex turns a woman off, unless you have some sort of strong gut feeling or intuition that suggest your negative assumptions are valid. I prefer to allow a woman to convey to me that some particular sexual activity is not her "cup of tea."

Recognize that there is a big difference between having a sexually provocative conversation with a woman, and "hollering crude obscenities" at her

One thing I have noticed since college is that many young (and immature) men think "talking dirty" to a woman is synonymous with going to a restaurant like Hooter's (great restaurant by the way – everyone who is familiar with me – even in other countries, knows that I love me some Hooter's chicken wings and Peach Snapple) and just yelling out X-rated comments to the waitresses (e.g., "Hey Baby … you have great tits!!")

Being crass and crude in your remarks toward a woman is distinctively different than being verbally erotic and sexually provocative in your conversations with women.

The latter requires a true and genuine sense of confidence and smoothness. The former just requires that you have a strip club mentality, a big mouth, and possibly a little bit of liquor in your system.

I would compare it to being a respected member of the media versus being a random fan in the stands. When you attend a Major League Baseball game, a National Football league contest, or a National Basketball League game, it is easy to yell out to a player you don't care for, "Hey [insert first name of professional athlete you do not like here] …. You SUCK!! All that money you're being played, and you SUCK!!!"

Do you think that player is really paying attention to you? Do you think that player would really take the time to respond to you? There is a 99% chance that player is going to ignore you and is not going to take you seriously.

Now, if a member of the media were to offer that same player some constructive criticisms, more than likely, that player is going to listen and possibly even engage him or her in conversation.

It is the same general principle with women. When you simply 'yell' or 'holler' comments at women, there is a 99% chance that they are going to tune you out. They are not going to take anything you say seriously.

You have to actually initiate a conversation with women prior to going into 'seduction mode.' At a bare minimum, you have to establish some degree of eye contact with them and get into "their space." If you are sitting or standing more than three feet away from them, and yelling out X-rated comments about various parts of their anatomy, that is not going to turn on too many women. More than likely, you will be totally ignored.

Similarly, never be in "humor mode" when you are trying to seduce a woman. Humor and seduction do not really go together. I believe it was the movie star Eddie Murphy who once said, "you can be funny with women, and you can be sexy with women, but it is very challenging to be both at the exact same moment in time."

I rarely if ever try to be "funny" and "seductive" at the same time. Most women will not take you seriously. They will perceive your attempt at getting them aroused as some sort of a 'joke.' They will look at you as if you're playing a character, instead of being the real you. It is okay to be 'casually witty' with women when you are in seduction mode, but avoid trying to be "Mr. Funny Man" or "Mr. Entertainer." Don't be the 'dancing monkey' for women. That is not a turn-on for women.

Unless you are feeling really bold and 'ballsy,' and you know for a fact that you and a woman have a good degree of sexual chemistry between you two, avoid touching women in any of her "I don't know you that well" spots

This is pretty self-explanatory. I rarely touch women until I know for a 100% fact that she and I have an above-average degree of sexual chemistry going on. It might be okay to touch a woman's hand, arm, or shoulder, but do not be so bold as to squeeze a woman's breast(s) or grope a woman's butt.

At a minimum, you might be slapped. At a maximum, you might find yourself with a sexual harassment or sexual assault charge. Keep your hands off of women until they give you a crystal clear "green light" that you are free to get physically aggressive with them.

This is where the art and skill of recognizing women's body language signs come into play. The vast majority of women will let you know with their eyes, their mouths, and their overall body language when you have an "invitation" to touch them in a provocative manner.

I always tell men I advise: Converse with and interact with as many women as possible even if they end up rejecting you. My talent for effectively recognizing identifying women's positive and negative body language comes from literally years and years of interacting with hundreds of women.

In the next section, Part Two, I will offer some real-life scenarios with real-life dialogue that I have used with a number of women who I conversed with, and in many cases, ended up in bed with. I hope Part One provided you with the basic fundamentals. Part Two will show how I used these fundamentals to my advantage.

Quick recap thus far:

1) One of the most powerful tools for verbal seduction is the combination of a calm, relaxed, seductive voice and your ability to create erotic thoughts and visualizations in a woman's head, using your conversational skills.

2) As mentioned in Chapter One and Chapter Two, many women will have an adverse reaction to sexually provocative conversations, not so much because they simply "don't like sex," but rather because the idea of engaging in an erotically explicit conversation goes against their social programming and brainwashing.

3) Most men and women are sexually aroused by what they see and what they hear; men generally tend to be more visual and women generally tend to be more auditory. If you train your voice to have a more 'seductive' tone and quality to it, you can actually get women very sexually aroused just by using your words and voice.

4) In order to get women turned on, you must be willing to risk being criticized, insulted or rejected. You cannot get women highly aroused by being overly cautious.

5) If you have yet to have sex with a woman, you should never try to 'force' a woman to think about or visualize having sex with you; sometimes, you may have a better chance at getting a woman aroused by making her think of her favorite male celebrity, a past spouse or ex-boyfriend, or anyone else who she has already had enjoyable and satisfying sex with.

6) There is a difference between being seductive and verbally erotic, and simply being crass and crude. Do not aggressively touch women, or be too quick to make comments about their body parts. Also, do not try to be "Mr. Funny Man" with women when you are attempting to seduce them into sex. Confidence, not humor, is the greatest aphrodisiac for women.

Alan Roger Currie

PART TWO:

She IS That Kind of Girl

Erotic Fiction Based on the Real-Life Verbal Seduction Experiences of Alan Roger Currie

If you are a prudish type (I doubt it if you purchased this book, and read it up to this point), please stop reading now.

If you think Part One was raw, real and uncensored in parts, Part Two is definitely going to be arguably the most XXX-rated content I have ever been bold enough to publish publicly.

There was a point in the mid-90s where I actually wanted to pursue a career as a screenwriter for adult films (some would say that is a bit of an oxymoron). I actually went to a workshop in Santa Monica, California entitled, "How to Break into the Adult Film Industry" that was sponsored by The Learning Annex®, and the teacher was adult film legend Nina Hartley.

Ms. Hartley sort of laughed when I told her that I wanted to be a screenwriter in the porn industry. Most of the popular porn films do not have much of a plot or any sort of true character development, but I had a handful of female friends at the time in Los Angeles who had encouraged me to at least try.

Just about all of my stories featured here in Part Two are approximately 80-90% autobiographical truth, with about 10-20% of each story representing some degree of "fictional embellishment" to protect the real names, the real places, and the real days / dates / times of my encounters. Just about all of the names used in each of the following stories are made-up.

What is not factitious or fictitious are the general scenarios described, the thoughts running through my head at the time and the subsequent reflections, and probably 95-99% of the dialogue that is used between the characters and I in each story. I tried to keep each story as close to what really happened in real life as possible.

Part Two of this book will include six stories based on some of my real-life seduction experiences over the years:

Verbal Seduction Story #1
Sex in a living room full of people: Alan Roger Currie escalates from Mode Two Nice Guy to Mode One Seducer

Verbal Seduction Story #2
Grocery stores have been good to me: Alan Roger Currie takes a study break and gets some pussy

Verbal Seduction Story #3
All work and a little erotic play: Alan Roger Currie drops off his resume while the office assistant drops down her leggings

Verbal Seduction Story #4
My Mode One experience with an R&B star: Alan Roger Currie gets rejected, but still leaves the conversation with a smile

Verbal Seduction Story #5
The Aural Sex Seduction Method: Alan Roger Currie uses phone sex to create instantaneous sexual chemistry in-person

Verbal Seduction Story #6
The best wingman a friend can have: Alan Roger Currie uses Mode One Behavior to score a threesome for a friend

At the beginning of each story, I will tell you what the premise was, what type of woman I was dealing with (return to page 14 again if need be), and then I will set up the basic back drop of the story and the overall scenario surrounding the verbal seduction that took place.

Warning: These stories are more about the seduction and arousal phase of sex than the actual intercourse or climax (unless there is something for my [male] readers to learn from the sex itself).

None of my stories are representative of me meeting a woman, she and I conversing for a while, and then we simply go somewhere and have sex. As I stated at the beginning of the book, that is not representative of a true seduction.

A true seduction takes place when you meet a woman, let her know your sexual desires, interests and intentions … and she initially exhibits some degree of resistance and reluctance, or worse, she begins to criticize you or insult you … but then, because of your persuasive charm and verbal seduction skills … you end up provoking her to change her mind and she eventually reciprocates your sexual desires and interests.

Four out of the following six stories are representative of me meeting a woman, and that woman initially, temporarily or indefinitely behaves as though she is not that interested in me or is turned off by me … and then later on, I end up overcoming her "justifications for resistance" and we end up having sex.

A word of advice to the men reading: Please do not try to imitate or emulate my dialogue with the women in the stories "word-for-word." You might not have the same personality that I do to make a lot of my dialogue effective. Instead, pay attention to my mindset and demeanor, which I will usually describe in great detail in each story. At the end of each story, I will offer an overview of the key points to remember for each story.

One of the criticisms I received from many of my male readers when I published Mode One was that I did not include enough examples of the specific dialogue that I used with women who I approached and ultimately seduced. Those omissions were by design. I hate dialogue copycats. That is what leads to corny, overused "pick up lines." Create your own original dialogue with women based on your own personality.

For example, if you rarely use profanity with women, and you normally use non-profane, “PG-13” type language, do not try to use X-rated or XXX-rated language with women in the same manner that I do with women. You can still be bold, confident, upfront and straightforwardly honest with women about your sexual desires, interests and intentions without necessarily having to use graphic, erotically explicit language. I said the same thing in my book, Mode One.

If you are a man reading these stories, I hope they help further your level of knowledge and insight into the art of verbally seducing women. Remember: Seduction is primarily about these four traits: 1) A high degree of confidence and bold, straightforward honesty; 2) A high level of indifference toward negative reactions, criticisms, insults, and rejection; 3) a seasoned knack for quickly identifying a woman’s body language cues and signs; and 4) always maintaining a calm, relaxed voice and a calm, relaxed, ultra-confident demeanor.

If you are a woman reading these stories, I hope at least some of the dialogue provokes you to put one or two of your fingers between your legs so that you can start lightly and slowly massage your clit while beginning to play with your pussy.

Enjoy the stories.

Verbal Seduction Story #1

Sex in a living room full of people:
Alan Roger Currie escalates from a
Mode Two Nice Guy to a Mode One Seducer

General Premise: Involved in a "triple date" with two close friends one Friday night

Rating on the 1 to 5 Inhibited VS Uninhibited Scale: Woman was a "2" pretending to be a "4"

Major Justification for Resistance: Did not want to be perceived as an 'easy lay' or a 'ho'

Many of my enthusiastic and loyal male supporters always ask me, "Alan … when was the VERY FIRST TIME that you can recall exhibiting Mode One Behavior toward a woman?"

When I was in high school, just about every female I had sex with was either a girl I was dating, or a girl who I knew ahead of time had a 'crush' on me.

Even my early years in college were like that. Just about every woman I had sex with were women who I was romantically involved with, or if it was casual sex, the woman had made it clear to me that she was attracted to me and interested in me prior to us engaging in intercourse.

I think the very first time I actually "seduced" a woman (i.e., overcame some degree of harsh criticism, reluctance, or resistance in order to get a woman to have sex with me) was probably when I was about 21 going on 22.

I had broken up with a long-time college girlfriend, and I was just getting readjusted to being single again. A very close friend of mine, Drake, and another good friend of mine, Vincent, invited me to join them on a "triple date." I was not all that enthusiastic about participating, but both friends heavily persuaded me to join them because Drake's date was going to be bringing along her younger female cousin.

I arrived at Vincent's apartment, and soon, three women showed up. My "date for the evening" was a sistah (for my non-Black and non-American readers, 'sistah' is slang for an African-American woman) who had a disposition that was about 2/3 "middle class" and about 1/3 "ghetto sassy." Her name was Deirdre. Drake's date was Deirdre's older cousin, Janice, and Vincent's date was a young lady named Tyla.

For about an hour or so, we just sat around Vincent's apartment talking, cracking jokes, eating snacks, drinking wine coolers, and getting to know one another better. Drake and Janice had fucked already, so the sexual chemistry between them was already evident. Vincent and Tyla had not yet had sex, but based on my observation of how the two interacted, my prediction was that Vincent was well his way to exchanging orgasms with Tyla.

It was I who had probably the most uphill battle of the three friends involved. I didn't know my date at all, and she was being extremely smart-alecky and sarcastic all evening. As time passed, Deirdre's personality began to annoy me more and more. Physically, she was very sexy. Deirdre had a very nice figure. I'll say this: Personality and behavior-wise, she was not the type of woman I would've pursued as a girlfriend (among other reasons, she just talked too damn much for my taste), but she was not the type of woman I would've kicked out of my bed on a Friday or Saturday night if I were in-between relationships.

Based on our conversation, I got the sense that her usual preference for romantic and sexual companions were men who had very urban, streetwise sensibilities (i.e., 'thuggish' or 'roughneck' types). She perceived me as being "bougie" (pronounced 'boo-jee', which is slang for "bourgeoisie" or "upper middle class"), which I found very entertaining.

All she did was nitpick at various aspects of my personality and behavior all night. Most of her criticisms, insults, and personal jabs were lighthearted, but they were still annoying nonetheless.

"I bet you date those 'Jack and Jill' type bougie women, don't you…" The fact that she was even familiar with Jack and Jill was moderately impressive (for my foreign readers, Jack and Jill is a very selective, middle class-oriented organization here in the United States that a lot of upper middle class, highly educated African-American families belong to).

The truth was, I actually had gone out on dates with my share of women who were from families that belonged to the 'Jack and Jill' organization. I never considered myself 'ghetto' or 'street,' but I also never considered myself pretentious or 'snooty' either. I generally have always categorized myself as an "in-between" Black person. Over the years, I have maintained friendships with Black men and women from both extremes of the socio-economic spectrum.

As I mentioned in my first paperback, Mode One, my late mother had brought me up to always behave like a well-mannered "gentleman." My mother believed that when you present yourself to women as a well-mannered, 'classy gentleman,' your chances would increase of attracting a "high quality" woman. By 'high quality,' she meant women who would make a good wife and a great mother to my (potential) children.

I recall one time, when I was a college student in Bloomington, Indiana, I had a conversation with a female friend of mine named Francesca. She was asking me what specific qualities and attributes in a woman distinguished her from being "girlfriend" material versus "one-night stand / weekend fling / casual sex" material.

Later in the conversation, Francesca started offering her own assessment of men who she felt either fit in the "steady boyfriend" category or the "I-just-want-him-to-fuck-me-for-a-few-days-or-a-few-weeks" category. She even offered a third category, which were men who could 'float' back-and-forth between the first two categories.

Francesca ended up saying, "Alan … I think you are in the 'steady boyfriend' category. I never hear women expressing a desire to have casual sex with you. When your name is mentioned, all the girls talk about is wanting you as their next boyfriend." Now, you would think that comment would flatter me, right? Wrong.

That comment pissed me off because I wanted Francesca to place in me in that third "floater" category. I wanted to be perceived as both romantically desirable ("steady boyfriend" category) and sexually desirable ("casual sex" category).

Returning to the evening of the triple-date scenario with Deirdre, I could tell that Deirdre looked at me as this "goody two-shoes" type. The type that didn't drink, didn't use profanity, didn't smoke weed, and went to church every Sunday.

I guess you could say her assessment was fairly accurate, because I was not a big drinker (more of a social drinker), I was not really into drugs (I think I inhaled a joint a handful of times in my life), and I had been raised in the Lutheran Church since elementary school (where I later served on the church's Board of Trustees as the High School Youth Director).

Probably my only real vice, if you want to even call it a 'vice,' was my X-rated mouth and hardcore sense of eroticism. I love to fuck "porno movie" style more so than I get into "making love" like in a conservative PG-rated romantic drama. I absolutely love to get my dick sucked. I may not roll a joint or snort cocaine with a woman, or drop back shots of vodka with a woman, but I will put my dick in their mouth in a micro-second.

After ninety minutes or more of entertaining chit chat and lighthearted antagonistic conversation with Deirdre, I started to make it known to her that I wanted to get physical, and eventually sexual. Every time I made a move though, Deirdre would rebuff me. "You don't think I'm one of those hos that gives it up on the first night do you? (she laughs and giggles) Brutha puhleaze. I am no man's ho. I am not a slut. You will be lucky to get a kiss on the cheek by the end of the night."

After a while, I became agitated and frustrated. My attitude was, "I came out of the house for this shit? To listen to this woman do all of this damn talking about shit I could care less about? Fuck this bullshit." I tried my best to keep my growing frustration and negativity in check, because I didn't want to rain on anyone else's party. Drake and Janice were getting along fine, and so was Vincent and Tyla. Both couples had already kissed at this point, and were in the early stages of making out. Deirdre and I were the only couple in the room that was not making out yet.

I can't stand to be around a woman who is not willing to be physical or sexual with me when I'm horny. I mean, I absolutely hate it. I'd rather be at home by myself jacking off to a good porno flick than to interact with a woman platonically when I'm horny. I only like being around women platonically if I am in a relationship (and I'm already being sexually satisfied by my girlfriend) or if I am not horny or I am not physically or sexually attracted to the woman whose company I am sharing.

I have a male friend that used to tease me all the time back in the mid-to-late 1990s when we lived in Los Angeles together. He would say, "Alan … you are one brutha that hates to be around women if they are not talking about fucking. 'Are we fuckin'?' should be your personal mantra with women. There should be a poster of you smirking, with your arms raised, and on the poster it says, 'Are we fuckin'?"

This friend and I used to laugh about it, but all jokes aside, that is how I really am. I am not very good at "pretending" to be interested in only a platonic social interaction with a woman when I know deep-down that I want to have sex with her. It is actually that particular quirk or frustration of mine that first led me to start exhibiting Mode One Behavior toward women.

As a man, I see other men do this constantly. And what is funny, there are so many naïve women out here that can't even identify it. Very few men I have met and conversed with in my life enjoy sharing the company of a woman in a purely platonic manner if they find that woman physically attractive and sexually appealing. Very few.

I tell most of my attractive female friends all the time: "I may act like I am 'just your 'friend' for now, but if I ever catch you bending over in front of me without any panties on, I'm going to slide my hard dick in your pussy and fuck you silly." They usually giggle and say, "Alan, you're so bad. You're so nasty." I am not joking.

Back to the story again, I kept making mild physical moves, and Deirdre kept rejecting each one of them. Finally, I went outside of the apartment. Sometimes, when I get frustrated, I just need to take a walk, so I was on the verge of taking a walk.

To my surprise, Deirdre followed me outside. She was like, "What are you doing? So, you're going to be anti-social now? You're going to pout like a baby because I won't let you tongue kiss me and make out with me? What a crybaby!!" Then, she just started laughing. And laughing. And laughing.

Did you see the movie Back to the Future? Remember how Marty McFly (actor Michael J. Fox) went back in time, and found out that his Dad, George (actor Crispin Glover) was basically a geek, a nerd and a wimp? (Spoiler Alert if you have not seen the movie) There was a scene in that film where the "bully" in the film, "Biff," is on the verge of date-raping Marty's (future) mother.

Marty's (future) father comes to protect her, but he is scared of Biff. Biff tells him to go away, and pushes him. Then, Biff just starts laughing. And laughing. And laughing. You can see Marty's father starting to get angry and angrier. He had always been the "wimpy nice guy," but at this moment, his jaws were tightening and his fist was balling up. Sure enough, George McFly cocks back, and knocks Biff the fuck out.

George's life was never the same after that. No more wimp, no more geek, no more loser. George ends up marrying the woman of his dreams, and they live happily ever after.

Well, I felt like George McFly when Deirdre was laughing at me, and referring to me as a 'crybaby.' Up to this point, I had always bit my tongue with a lot of sassy, smart-alecky type women because I was always trying to adhere to my late mother's advice about "presenting myself as a well-mannered and classy gentleman" when in the company of a woman.

Well, at this moment, I was like, "Fuck that 'Mr. Gentleman' bullshit." I remember a fraternity brother of mine named Bo once said, "There is a time and a place to be a gentleman … but sometimes, you just have to get raw and greasy with a woman." Bo was hardcore and from the streets, but he was intelligent. He had dated and fucked his share of hot honeys. What he meant by 'raw and greasy' was simply to be your real, true self, and unleash your uncensored sexuality to a woman.

As I alluded to earlier, I had been 'raw and greasy' with women before, but it was always with women who I knew for a fact ahead of time that they wanted to have sex with me. Up to this point, I had never really been 'raw and greasy' with a first-time acquaintance in the very first conversation … especially a woman who was rebuffing my advances left and right all night. Again, at this point, I was just like "Fuck it."

As she kept laughing, I looked her dead in her eyes. I could feel my whole demeanor changing. I was slowly, but surely experiencing a metamorphosis from “Mr. Well Spoken Nice Guy” to “Mr. I Want to Put My Dick in Your Mouth.”

Finally, I said, “Crybaby?!? I’ll tell you this … I won’t be crying when I am watching you suck my hard dick.”

She stopped laughing. She said, “Excuse me?!? What did you say?!?!?” Deirdre’s demeanor was almost as if she was about to haul back and try to slap me. The “gentleman” side of me was tempted to back off that comment and possibly apologize. But my newly found “Mode One” side had been stifled enough, and was ready to come out and play. I said, “You’re excused. And you heard me. You got two choices tonight … either leave me the fuck alone … or let’s go back inside and fuck. Either, or.”

Remember when I said one of the keys to seduction is not caring what women think of your behavior or your manner of verbal expression? This was one of those moments for me. I did not care if this woman thought of me as an “asshole” or a “jerk” for saying what I said. I either wanted her to leave me alone … or give me some pussy or suck my dick.

That’s the primary key to being Mode One with women. Always put a woman in a position where she has to either a) 100% acknowledge an interest in you, and subsequently reciprocate your desires and interests, or b) 100% acknowledge a complete lack of interest in you, and firmly reject you and eventually leave you alone. Anytime you allow a woman to offer you a response that is somewhere “in-between” full reciprocation and full rejection, you are opening up the door for a woman to engage you in manipulative ‘head games.’

I just knew this woman was going to fly off the handle, and start cursing me out. I was ready for it. She was a straight-up sistah with some ‘street’ tendencies (even though I believe she had much more of a middle class upbringing than a "I'm from the hood" background; she just liked to play the hard, urban role with men). To my surprise though, her voice got much softer after I firmly stated my two non-negotiable choices. Matter of fact, her whole disposition changed.

She said, "Wow. I'm seeing a different side of Alan now, huh?" I didn't even respond. I just looked at her in her eyes. Then I said, "Where is your car?" She looked around at the near parking lot, and pointed it out to me. I said, "Let's go to your car." She obeyed and we walked to her car.

Minutes later, we were in her car, and I just pulled my dick out, and started stroking it. She looked at me like I had lost my mind. "You are REALLY trippin' me out now mister…" I said, "Shut the fuck up and look at my hard dick." She resisted for a few seconds and then she started staring at my dick while I stroked it. She just gazed at it, all the while licking her lips.

"I have never had a man do something like this without being drunk … are you drunk?" She had this nervous, slightly uncomfortable giggle following that question. I had actually had one or two wine coolers, but I was far from drunk. I knew exactly what I was doing. I am a man who does not need alcohol or liquor in my system in order to exhibit bold behavior.

After a few moments of watching her watch me stroke my hard dick, I said very firmly, "Suck it." Deirdre started lowering her head, but then I took a firm hold of the back of her head and guided her head down toward my dick. She started sucking my dick like she owed me money. She was really, really into it.

I stopped, and lifted her head up. I said, "Apologize to me for giving me a hard time..." She paused, but then she obeyed. In a soft voice she said, "I'm sorry for acting like a bitch Alan…" I didn't expect Deirdre to use the "b-word," but it sure did add some extra "spice" to our verbal interplay. I enthusiastically said, "Oooooh …. Say it again…"

Remember this phrase of mine. This would, over the next 20-25 years, become my "signature phrase" related to verbal seduction and talking dirty to women during sex and phone sex. "Oooooh …. Say it Again." This is how that phrase became the title of this very book you are reading (The truth is, just about all of my former lovers or phone sex partners who I remain in regular contact with damn near demanded that 'Oooooh … Say it Again' be the title of my next book).

I made her say "I'm sorry for acting like a bitch" about five or six times. Then she said, "Can we please go back inside? It's kinda cold out here" I said, "Say 'please sir … can we please go back inside where it's warm so I can continue sucking your dick?'" Sure enough, she obeyed. I made her repeat it twice by saying, "Oooooh …. Say it Again."

We went back into Vincent's apartment, and all of the lights were dimmed down very low. It was almost so dark in the living room that it was a challenge to make everyone out. Drake and Janice were making out on the couch in the living room, and Vincent and Tyla were making out in a big, comfy chair.

I told Deirdre to take off her clothes. She said, "Yes sir…" in a very soft, submissive voice. Moments later, she was in nothing but a bra and panties. I slowly slid down her panties, and started kissing her on her neck. Then I took off her bra, and started slowly sucking her nipples. I engaged in about ten minutes or so of foreplay, and then I started fucking her in the missionary position with her legs on my shoulders.

Within minutes, Drake, Vincent, Janice and Tyla were TRIPPIN'. I mean, big-time trippin. I could hear both couples whispering about me fucking Deirdre, and I could even see them in the dimly lit room pointing at me and making gestures with their hands. They were saying things like, "They are fucking! Right there on the floor in front of us!! They are bold!!" Even though the living room was dimly lit, you could still make out Deirdre and I's bodies on the floor.

I was expressing all sorts of erotic dirty talk to Deirdre while I was fucking her. I love to talk dirty during sex.

Me: "You love this dick don't you…"

Her: "Yes sir … I love it …"

Me: "Oooooh … Say it again…'

Her: "I love your dick sir …. I love it …"

Me: "Now, tell me again that you are sorry for giving me such a hard time earlier tonight… call yourself a bitch again…"

Her: "I am so sorry sir … I was acting like a bitch earlier … but now … I'm your bitch…"

Me: "Ooooooooooooh …. Say that again …"

Her: "I am your bitch sir … I'm your obedient good bitch sir …."

I love fucking a woman who has made a transition from previously being defiant, smart-alecky and hard-to-get-along-with to becoming very erotically obedient and submissive. I mean, I absolutely love that contrast in a woman. I believe all men do (except those rare men who love being erotically dominated by women). That is a huge turn-on for me.

Robert Beck a.k.a. "Iceberg Slim" said in his book, PIMP: The Story of My Life that many women will purposely bust a man's balls in order to a) see how much backbone a man has, and b) to motivate men who they are interested in having sex with to become more (erotically) dominant toward them.

Deirdre and I fucked and fucked and fucked. I came once and she came twice. Minutes later, we both went into the bathroom, cleaned up, and got dressed. Our chemistry was great from that point forward.

Later, Drake expressed disbelief. He was like, "Dude … dude … dude … what the fuck was that?? How did you get that woman to let you fuck her in front of all of us like that?? Is she drunk?? It almost seemed like you had her 'hypnotized' or something. She seemed like a totally different person than she did earlier in the evening. What did you do, or say to her??"

I have had at least a handful of female friends tell their girlfriends, "Watch out for Alan … he will put you in a trance. He is some sort of verbal hypnotist." I even pitched a spec screenplay in the late 1990s to a couple of Hollywood studios called "Hypnotized" which was based on my Mode One seduction principles and philosophies. What I have found is, when you get real with women … I mean, really, really REAL with women … you can, in your own way, 'hypnotize' them.

Quick lessons to take away from this experience of mine:

- Don't ever allow a woman to browbeat you, and leave you feeling agitated, frustrated or disrespected on a date. It is one thing to be well-mannered, cordial and polite, but it is another thing to suppress your true desires, interests and intentions to the point where you are being timid or disingenuous. Even if you don't end up having sex with a woman, always be forthright and outspoken about your romantic or sexual desires, interests and intentions.

- Secondly, many women will give off a "hard front," but that is all it is … a "front." A façade. Robert Beck a.k.a. "Iceberg Slim," a legendary pimp from the '60s and '70s, said that many women will try to "test you" to see how much shit you will take from them before you put them in their place. Many submissive women will purposely act defiant, domineering and controlling just to see if you're going to unleash your dominant side with them. This is what Deirdre was doing with me. In the end, she wanted to be erotically dominated. She challenged me to be more dominant, and I rose to the challenge. You do the same.

Verbal Seduction Story #2

Grocery stores have been good to me:
Alan Roger Currie takes a study break and gets some pussy

General Premise: I take a study break while apartment sitting and meet a young lady at the local grocery store

Rating on the 1 to 5 Inhibited VS Uninhibited Scale: Woman was a "3" pretending to be a "4"

Major Justification for Resistance: Did not believe in having (casual) sex with a man in the same day she met him

As I mentioned in my book, Mode One, even though I started exhibiting Mode One Behavior toward women back in the mid-1980s, I really did not begin specifically referring to my ultra-confident, upfront, unapologetic and straightforwardly honest behavior as 'Mode One Behavior' until October of 1990.

Verbal Seduction Story #1 was not really a true 'Mode One' experience, because for the first hour-and-a-half to two hours of that night, I was Mode Two. I did not escalate up to Mode One until later. This story is more representative of me being Mode One with a woman from the time I opened my mouth.

For those who have not yet read my first paperback, Mode One (shame on you), here is a quick recap of each mode:

Mode One Behavior: When you confidently approach a woman, and express your romantic or sexual desires, interests and intentions to that woman in an upfront, unapologetic, straightforwardly honest manner usually within the first three-to-five minutes of your first conversation with her;

Mode Two Behavior: When you approach a woman, and initially, you indulge her in five-to-ten minutes or more of entertaining or highly flattering "small talk" and "chit chat," and then, later on toward the middle or end of your first conversation with this woman (or in some cases, not until your second or third conversation with a woman), you let her know what your honest desires, interests, and intentions are in a very cautious, vague, polite, or "beat-around-the-bush" manner;

Mode Three Behavior: This mode actually has three sub-categories: 1) When you avoid approaching a woman at all due to a severe fear of rejection; 2) When you approach a woman and initiate a conversation, but all you do is engage her in trivial "small talk," never expressing any sort of romantic or sexual desires and interests, or 3) When you approach a woman, and give her a misleading impression of what your true desires, interests and intentions are (e.g., pretending to be interested in a platonic friendship when you really want to date a woman, or pretending to be interested in a long-term or monogamous sexual relationship when you really just want a short-term or non-monogamous sexual relationship)

Mode Four Behavior: When you approach a woman with the primary objective of insulting her, harshly criticizing her, antagonizing her, and purposely trying to anger her and piss her off. You have no real interest in dating a woman or having sex with her, you just get off on leaving women feeling agitated.

By late 1990, no later than early 1991, I had become fully cognizant of which mode I was operating in at any point in time during one of my interactions with a woman of interest. I knew exactly when I was being Mode One with a woman, Mode Two, Mode Three, or Mode Four.

In January of 1991, I returned to college to finish my last few credit hours toward my undergraduate degree in Economics (I had left school earlier before earning my degree to pursue a professional acting career). At the time I did not have my own place (was living with my parents), so every woman I had sex with during this particular point in time, I had to either go over to their place (assuming they had their own place), or I had to rent a hotel or an hourly motel.

Every now and then, my fraternity brother “JK” would let me use his apartment whenever he was traveling out of town on business. I really appreciated his generosity, because it was the closest thing I had available to having my own place. JK and I pledged together and we are still close friends to this day.

One weekend, JK was going to be out of town from Wednesday evening until the following Monday afternoon or evening. JK told me that I could use his apartment from that Thursday through that Sunday. I ended up getting the keys from him and coming to his place that Friday afternoon.

I did not have a serious girlfriend at the time, which meant I was like many single heterosexual men: horny for sex.

Actually, I did a good job of not even thinking about sex most of the time because I was so ultra-focused on academics at the time that women were very much a secondary priority for me. I very badly wanted to earn “Dean’s List Scholar Honors,” so I tried to avoid social distractions and other temptations at all costs. Consequently, I spent practically that entire Friday studying for each of the courses I was enrolled in.

On Saturday, even though JK left me with an open invitation to help myself to his refrigerator, I decided to go out and do some grocery shopping. I ended up at the local grocery store in the Sauk Village, Illinois area on Saturday evening with the intention of buying some food and beverages to last me thru Sunday afternoon or evening.

My weight has always been up and down, and this was a period when it was down. My physique was pretty lean and athletic from doing a lot of running and also muscular from doing a lot of push-ups on a daily basis. As a result, I found myself shopping for healthy foods instead of tasty junk food.

After being in the store for about five minutes or so, I notice this very attractive woman who looked young. She looked to be about 21 or 22 (I was about 27 at the time). I could tell from her body that she had either participated in ballet dancing as a teenager, or ran track. All women who did ballet or ran track tend to have a particular type of build (particularly, their ass).

I was checking her out, and she could see that I was checking her out. As I got closer, I carefully examined her ring finger on her left hand to see if she had a wedding band on. Fortunately, she did not. So I assumed she was not married, and now I needed to find out if she was in the grocery store alone, or was their some male companion in another isle.

Me: “Shopping on a Saturday night huh …”

Her: “(smiles) Yep. There is hardly ever anyone in here on a Saturday evening … that is why Saturday night is one of my favorite nights to do grocery shopping….”

Me: “Are you here alone?”

Her: “(smiles) Yep. Just me, myself and I. What about you?”

Me: “Yes. I too am shopping on a Saturday night … by my damn self”

She giggles. I decide to make a move.

Me: “You and I should hook up….”

Her: “Oh really. And why is that…”

Me: “Because I am very attracted to you.”

Her: “Why thank you. That is flattering. What is your name?”

Me: “Alan. Alan Roger Currie.”

Her: "Wow. I get all three names huh? (laughs) I'm flattered. My name is Felicia"

Me: "So … what are you doing when you leave here …"

Her: "Uhm … DUH … Going home! Aren't you?"

Me: "Well, I don't live here. I am doing some apartment sitting for a fraternity brother of mine"

Her: "Oh … a frat man huh. So how long are you apartment sitting?"

Me: "Until tomorrow afternoon."

Her: "I should invite you to join me for church tomorrow morning! (giggles) Well, it was good meeting you. Take care."

Then, she just starts walking away. Of course, I was not going to allow that to just happen.

Me: "Hold up …."

I walk fast to catch up with her.

Me: "I think we should hook up in the near future …"

Her: "Sorry, but I don't just 'hook up' with strangers. I mean, you seem pretty harmless, but I don't know you."

Then, as I usually do many times with women … I just stop and look at her directly in her eyes. I don't say anything. I just spend a good six-to-eight full seconds just looking at her directly in her eyes to get a good read on her.

Her: "Why are you just staring at me like that…."

Time to express myself Mode One – HARDCORE style.

Me: "Because I can't wait to fuck you…"

Her (startled): "I beg your pardon?!?"

Me: “You heard me. I know for a 100% fact that you and I are going to end up fucking. I can just feel it. Ideally, I want to fuck you tonight … but even if I don’t fuck you tonight, I am very confident that you are going to let me fuck you sometime soon.”

She was speechless for a minute or two. I could tell she had never had a man be as bold, upfront and straightforward with her like I was being. She looked at me as if I had lost my damn mind.

Her: “Now this is truly a first. I guess I have to admire how bluntly honest you are about your desire for sex, but I have to let you know right off the bat – I do not meet men in the grocery store and then go somewhere and have sex with them. I mean, I don’t even know you! You could be crazy or something.”

Here are some important points to always remember:

Seduction is similar to sales. In sales, there are three reactions you are going to get from a potential customer: on one end, total interest; on the opposite end, total lack of interest; and then somewhere right in the middle of those two extremes is “resistance” or “reluctance.” It is the latter reaction that most requires your A+ sales skills.

When a customer is totally interested in your product or service, you don’t really have to “sell” them. The product or service is selling itself. On the flip side, if a customer is totally not interested in spending money on your product or service, then even the best salesman is not going to be successful.

Salesmanship most comes into play when a customer WANTS what you’re offering, but they are NOT CONVINCED that your product or service is of good quality, or they are not sure it is worth the price you are asking for.

Same principle applies to seduction. When you approach a woman, and you let her know what your romantic or sexual desires, interests and intentions are, you are only going to get one of three reactions: total interest (reciprocation), total lack of interest (rejection), or a reaction that is somewhere in-between, which usually means that a woman has some degree of interest in you … but the voice of her social programming is telling her, "Don't give in to him. Avoid having casual sex at all costs. You will be perceived as a 'ho,' a 'slut,' and an 'easy lay.' Don't risk your reputation! It is not worth it!"

What is the most effective way you can distinguish between rejection and resistance or reluctance?

When a woman is truly not interested in sharing your company in a romantic or sexual manner, she will usually just very calmly say, "I am not interested," or something to that effect and then just make an attempt to end her conversation with you. At minimum, she will attempt to switch the subject from sex to something non-sexual.

On the other hand, when a woman has some degree of attraction to you and some degree of interest in sharing your company in a romantic or sexual manner, but her social programming is telling her to avoid having (casual) sex with you, this is when she will begin to highlight specific attributes about you that she doesn't care for … or offer you very detailed explanations as to why you two cannot hook up.

Women who are truly not interested in you will not offer detailed explanations or very specific, nitpicky criticisms of your behavior. Only women who are 'pretending' not to be interested will take the time to offer very specific and nitpicky criticisms of your behavior or your manner of verbal expression.

The latter is exactly what Felicia started doing . . .

Her: "You're a little bit too forward for me … I don't think we would be a good match. I'm a church-going girl . . ."

Me: "So you like men who are full of shit …"

Her: "I didn't say that …"

Me: “Either you like straightforward honesty … or you like bullshit. Or, even if you don’t LIKE bullshit, you tolerate it…”

Her: “Let me make this clear Mr. Alan Roger Currie … I don’t like men who are dishonest or full of shit. I really don’t. And I don’t tolerate men who are dishonest or full of shit either. But I also don’t like men who approach me and immediately talk about ‘fucking me’ either. I don’t like men who are totally focused on just sex. I like men who carry themselves like a gentleman, who have a number of interests beyond just sex…”

Now, I am smirking. I have this woman right where I want her. Her whole body language was starting to get riled up and feisty, which is exactly how I want a woman to be when I am being Mode One with a woman and looking to seduce her.

Me: “So … are we fucking tonight … or tomorrow …”

Her (sighs emphatically): “You just don’t give up, do you? No Mr. Alan Roger Currie, we are not having ‘fucking’ tonight, tomorrow, or ever. I mean, you’re a confident, seemingly intelligent guy and everything, but I just don’t connect with men on an intimate level that quickly. I don’t know you, or know anything about you. You could be married for all I know….”

See what I’m talking about? No woman who is truly not interested in me would even take time to give me that much verbiage and do that much talking. Know your women fellas.

Me: “Okay. I am going to do one more thing Felicia and then I’m going to leave you alone….”

Her: “And what is that…”

Me: “I am going to find a pen, and a piece of paper, and I’m going to leave you with my number….”

Felicia just sighed again, as if to say, “Damn! You don’t give up, do you?!?” I made my way to the deli department, got a pen and a piece of paper, wrote down my name, my number, and JK's apartment phone number. I came back and gave it to Felicia, who was still standing in the same spot. (that is important to remember … she did not move from her spot.)

Me: "I am very confident that I am going to hear from you tonight…."

Her: "I'll say this about you Mr. Alan Roger Currie … You are one very, very confident, and one very, very persistent man. You are relentless."

I moved closer to her, got in her space, and whispered in her ear.

Me: "I'm going to fuck you… I'm going to slowly slide my hard juicy dick in and out of your pussy … in and out … in and out … I'm going to have your pussy so moist … so wet …"

Revisiting the internet survey I mentioned on page 63-64, 54% of women surveyed said they love for a man to talk dirty to them in an X-rated or XXX-rated manner, assuming that they have some degree of interest in him and attraction for him. 28% of the women surveyed said they prefer a more PG-13 or R-rated style of erotic dirty talk, and the remaining 18% said they only like "subtle innuendo" or no erotic dirty talk at all (women who are true 5s would fall into that 18%).

Her: "You are so bad!!! Does your mother know how bad you are? Like I said earlier … instead of talking about 'fucking,' you and I should be going to church together tomorrow!"

Me: "So … my frat brother's place in about two hours?"

Felicia sighs yet again, as if to say, "this is the most persistent brutha I have met in my life!" And she is right. I tell men all the time: If you firmly reject me, I will simply leave you alone. But if you resist me, I will become extremely persistent.

I once again look at her directly in her eyes. I can tell she is on the verge of giving in to me. I can feel it. She returns the look, and eventually, she displays a smirk on her face.

Her: "How far is your friend's place from here?"

BINGO. Got her.

Me: "Not far at all."

Her: "Let me finish my shopping. Write down the address on the back of this sheet of paper you gave me, and I will come and keep you company. But I want to let you know … I am just coming over to talk, chit chat, get to know you, and maybe watch a movie. Nothing remotely sexual is going to happen!"

Famous last words. I wrote down JK's address on the back of the small piece of paper that I had written my phone number on. I gave it to her, she put in her purse, we exchanged smiles, and then she walked away to continue her shopping.

I finished my shopping, paid for my groceries, and then I returned to JK's apartment. I took a quick shower, put some cologne on, and changed into some new casual clothes.

Then I wait. And wait. And wait. Two hours go by, and no phone call or apartment door buzzer. I am starting to think Felicia had changed her mind, and is going to flake out on me. So I fixed myself a meal, started watching television, and soon began doing some more studying for my classes.

Then, approximately three-and-a-half hours after I left the store, the apartment buzzer rings. It is Felicia. She had changed clothes and she had make-up on this time.

Even though she was about five years or so younger than me, she was very mature in her speech and demeanor. She was not silly at all. I offered her a few wine coolers, and we actually sat and conversed for about a half-hour or so.

Then, she brought up my approach.

Her (smiling): "You know you are really, really bold…"

Me (smirking): "I've heard that."

Her: "I bet you have. Do you approach all women like this? Do you tell all women right off the bat that you want to fuck them? And that you're going to slowly slide your hard dick in their pussies?"

Me: "Oooooh . . . Say it again …"

Her (giggles): "You are so bad. Once again Mr. Alan Roger Currie, do you tell all women right after meeting them that you want to fuck them and slide your hard dick in their pussies…."

Me: "If I think they are deserving of me fucking them, yes."

Her: "So that's what it was? I was 'deserving' of your dick?? Wow … you are too much Mr. Alan Roger Currie! You are truly one of a kind…"

Me: "Lean toward me…"

Felicia paused, and then leaned toward me. Seconds later, we were engaged in a passionate tongue kiss. We kissed … and kissed … and kissed. Next thing you know, my clothes were off, her clothes were off, and we were fucking like horny rabbits. And of course, I talked dirty to her the whole time we were fucking.

That year, I ended up having at least four more 'Mode One seductions' that were similar to this one. My belief in the power of Mode One was solidified. Mode One Behavior FOR LIFE.

Quick lessons to take away from this experience of mine:

- When you approach women in public venues such as grocery stores, bookstores, shopping malls, etc., take a quick scan of their ring finger to see if they have an engagement ring or wedding band on. Similarly, scan your surroundings or their surroundings to see if they are in that venue alone, with a relative or girlfriend, or a possible male companion. You don't want to quickly approach a woman and start being Mode One, only to have the woman's boyfriend, fiancé, or husband walk up a few seconds later.

- Always pay attention to a woman's body language in addition to listening to what she has to say, and how she verbally responds to you. Women who are genuinely not interested in you will start moving away from you. If a woman is interested, she will either remain in the same place, or move toward you. Similarly, women who are truly not interested in you don't say much other than, "I'm not interested." Women who are resisting you will offer very detailed explanations to justify their lack of interest in you or they will express very specific, nitpicky criticisms of you, your behavior, and your manner of verbal expression.

- Only be persistent with women when they are resisting your advances, or behaving as though they are reluctant to share your company. Do not become persistent with a woman after that woman has firmly rejected you. If there is one major complaint I have always received from women, it is that many men do not know when to accept the fact that they have been rejected, and when to leave them alone. Do not 'hound' or 'stalk' a woman. Anytime a woman says something like, "I have absolutely no interest in having sex with you" or "I have no interest in sharing your company in the near future," that means you have been firmly rejected.

Verbal Seduction Story #3

All work and a little erotic play:
Alan Roger Currie drops off his résumé while the office assistant drops down her leggings

General Premise: I go to a business office to drop off a résumé and a female from the office next door greets me

Rating on the 1 to 5 Inhibited VS Uninhibited Scale: Woman was a "2" pretending to be a "3"

Major Justification for Resistance: Was reluctant to have sex with a man she just met in her place of employment

There are some loyal supporters of mine who actually already know about this particular story. I have a webpage related to my site (http://www.modeone.net) entitled "How John Leslie's character of 'Jack' in the Adult Film Classic 'Talk Dirty to Me' helped influence Mode One Behavior." On that page, I listed five of my most memorable Mode One "same day seductions." This story was one of those five entries.

Have you ever been in a position where you had to look for a job when you knew ahead of time that you were going to quit? My situation was this: I was going to be starting graduate business school in mid-to-late August, but it was now early-to-mid May, and I needed a good-paying job. I already had a telemarketing job that was part-time, but that job had me stressed out from being on the phone for four-to-five hours straight each day I worked.

There were some employers who were offering 'seasonal' or 'summertime' employment, but the job I most wanted was looking for someone permanent. I did not want to lie, but I really did want this job. At minimum, I was going to pick up an application for the job and drop off my résumé.

The name of the building I was going to was called the Poplars Building which was in Bloomington, Indiana. The building primarily housed a lot of offices related to Indiana University, which was the biggest employer in the city.

The specific office I was going to was on the fifth floor, so I had a choice between taking the stairs or the elevator. I decided to take the elevator. My plan was to go upstairs, pick up an employment application while dropping off my résumé, and maybe engage in some friendly small talk with one of the personnel members of my potential employer.

I caught the next elevator to the fifth floor, and once I exited the elevator, I saw so many different office doors, that I was starting to get confused. I had to pull out my sheet of paper that had the exact office number on it.

At the time I got off of the elevator, it was about 12:05pm EST. A few moments later, I saw this sistah who was wearing these skin-tight white nylon or cotton spandex leggings. It literally looked as though someone had just spray painted her skin white. I mean, you could literally see the complete curvature, and even the defined crack of her ass in these leggings. She looked as though she had been a ballet dancer or track and field sprinter just like Felicia from the last story.

She had a small waist and what most Black men would categorize as an “onion” or a “bubble butt.” I mean, her ass was almost perfectly round. Black women come in all shades (which is what I love about them), and this sistah was a deep brown chocolate. This woman had some of the prettiest skin I have ever seen on a woman.

This sistah asked me did I need any help finding a particular office. I told her what office I was looking for. Turns out, she worked in the office that was right next door to the one I was looking for.

Her: "The people in the office you're looking for are all out for lunch until 1:00pm. Matter of fact, just about this entire floor leaves for lunch at 12 Noon and does not return until about 12:50pm or 12:55pm, if not a couple of minutes later."

Me: "And just what is your name . . ."

Her: "Charmaine. And yours?"

Me: "Alan. Alan Roger Currie. (pause) So I guess I need to come back in about an hour huh? I was going to pick up an application for employment and then drop off my resume…"

Her: "Well, if you want to, and you trust me, you could leave your resume with me, and I can drop it off when that office opens back up at 1pm…"

Me: "(fucking with her) Why should I trust you Charmaine? I mean, you don't really have a trustworthy face…"

Charmaine giggles. She gives me that look as if to say, "You're a trip."

Her: "Or … I was just going to eat my lunch in my office right next door. I'm bored … so if you want to sit in my office with me, and keep me company, you can …"

My dick got semi-erect at that moment (seriously). Right then, I was already like 95% sure I was going to end up fucking her in the near future. I just knew it. Sometimes, you can just tell by a woman's demeanor combined with the situation, and the woman's verbal responses to the things you say and ask. I was extremely confident that I was going to end up fucking Charmaine. I had no idea though we would end up fucking in her office that afternoon, but that is just how things worked out.

Me: “Sure. It would be my pleasure to keep you company…”

My devil horns were showing for sure. I was already visualizing myself fucking Charmaine. I could not take my eyes off her thighs, ass, and skin. She had a very sexy walk. You could tell by the way she moved that she was sensuous and loved to fuck. Her demeanor was very feminine and friendly.

I spent the first 7 or 8 minutes in her office just letting her eat her lunch while I browsed through a couple of magazines. Then, we engaged in probably about 2 or 3 minutes of entertaining “small talk” (and as you know, I hate small talk).

Finally, after about ten minutes or so into my visit, I brought up the subject of sex.

Me: “Have you ever been fucked in this office . . .”

Charmaine did not say anything for a good 10-15 seconds. She was damn near speechless. Finally, after seconds of silence, she said . . .

Me: “You’re excused…”

Her: “I cannot believe … you just asked me that question”

Me: “Well, believe it. I did.”

Her: “You have some mouth on you Alan …”

Me: “So I’ve been told. (pause) So … have you ever been fucked in this office? Have you ever had a man make you cum on his dick right here in this office?”

Here is what I have found when conversing with women. Never talk about fucking as if it is “abnormal conversation.” That makes the vibe feel ‘weird’ and ‘awkward’ between you and a woman. 99% of the time, I talk about fucking in a very "normal," natural, matter-of-fact type manner as if I'm talking about sports, politics, health and fitness, or grocery shopping.

I never allow myself to 'freak out' in response to a woman 'freaking out.' If they want to trip off of how candid and straightforward I discuss sex, I let them trip, but I always continue to maintain a very cool, calm, composed demeanor when discussing sex or expressing XXX-rated comments to women. I just remain very relaxed, say what I want to say, and let the conversation unfold from there.

If you give any woman even the slightest impression that deep-down you think discussing sexual enjoyment and orgasmic pleasure in a provocative, erotically explicit manner is "wrong," "socially inappropriate," "disrespectful," "crass," "rude," or "immoral," I can almost guarantee you that she is going to have a very adverse reaction to that type of conversation.

Returning to my conversation with Charmaine . . .

Her: "I don't know you well enough to have this sort of conversation with you, or to share any of my personal business with you…"

Me: "I'm not twisting your arm…"

Her: "Why do you want to know about my sex life, and what I've done or not done sexually with other men anyway? I just met you! Alan, you are really bold to even ask me a question like that!!"

Me: "I'm talking about your sex life because I want to fuck you…"

Her (pauses a bit before responding): "Is that right…"

Me: "Correction. I am GOING TO fuck you. I guarantee it."

Her: "Well aren't we cocky … (pause) I just have to ask you … is this your normal approach? Do you always ask women questions about their sex life when you first meet them?"

I get asked these sorts of questions a lot by women. "Are you always this bold and sexually straightforward with women?"

The reason why women ask these types of questions is because they don't want to feel like you give other women more respect than them. Truthfully, any answer you give them could potentially irritate them, which is why I usually don't like to answer such questions.

If you tell them, "Yes, I talk to ALL women like this," that makes them think that you are an ultra-horny, skirt-chasing man-whore who has no sense of discretion or selectivity.

If you tell them, "No, you are one of only a handful of women who I have talked to in an X-rated manner," that makes them think you look at most of the other women you approached and conversed with as "respectable good girls" and the women you have talked dirty to as "kinky, promiscuous whore" types.

With either answer, you give women ammunition for subjective criticisms against you. So, I usually avoid answering the question. If I do answer, I tell them the truth: I use X-rated language with just about any woman who I am interested in having intercourse with, interested in getting a blowjob from, or interested in having phone sex with. My preference is to always use erotically explicit language when discussing sex.

Me: "So …. answer my question … have you been fucked in this office?"

Her: "You are really too much Mr. Man. I don't know to read you. I bet you have a girlfriend somewhere on this campus, don't you. Does she know how kinky you are with other women?"

Me: “Yeah, right. We both know better. (pause) You’re good at getting off the subject. Just say ‘yes, I have’ or “no, I have not,’ then I will leave the issue alone. (pause) Okay, let me quit lying. I won’t leave the issue alone….”

Charmaine giggles at that last comment, and licks her lips.

Her: “Are you spoiled Alan? You seem spoiled to me. Do you expect to have your way with every woman you meet?”

Me: “So … how many times have you fucked in public …”

Charmaine sighs with lighthearted frustration over my persistence regarding getting her to answer my question.

Her: “Okay .. Okay … I will answer your nosy ass question. Yes Alan, I have fucked in public, and yes Alan, I have gotten fucked right here in this office. Happy now?”

Me: “Good girl. Good girl. Now was that hard??”

Charmaine smiles. We exchange a semi-lengthy stare in each other’s eyes. She licks her lips again. I notice that Charmaine starts moving her legs a lot. Tippy-toeing on each foot. Remember what I said about lip-licking and leg movement when I discussed body language signs to look for?

Her: “No, that was not hard … I’m just not used to sharing my personal business about my sex life with a total stranger…”

I then cross my two fingers as if to suggest that Charmaine and are real tight, and go way back.

Me: “You and I are about to be real close …”

Her: “Oh really….”

Me: “Yes … really. So .. who was it? An ex-boyfriend? A fuck buddy? A former co-worker?”

Her: “Damn you’re nosy! You want all the details huh?”

Me: “I’m a curious individual….”

Her: “I see. (pause) It was my most recent ex-boyfriend. (she points at a bathroom inside the office) He fucked me right in there…”

Me: “So I bet he just leaned you up against the sink and fucked you doggie-style…”

Her: “Wow. Good guess. That is exactly what he did. How did you know that?”

Me: “You can look at how the bathroom is laid out. He couldn’t have fucked you missionary; He could have sat on the toilet and had you ride his dick, but if I were in his shoes, my first choice would be to lean you against that sink, and fuck you doggie-style…”

Her: “You’re so nasty….”

Me: “Oooooh …. Say it again…”

Her: “You are so nasty Alan. You have this sort of ‘innocent’ face, but I can tell already that you are really, really nasty….”

Men, believe this when I tell you: Nine out of every ten women walking this earth love a man who is erotically naughty and nasty. Even the ones who try to pretend like they don’t, do.

There are at least three types of guys that will always be popular with most women:

1) Men with a high degree of wealth or social status; Why? Because you’re in a position to take care of a woman financially or you probably have ‘connections’ that can hook a woman up with employment and financial-related favors;

2) Men who are funny, empathetic, and good listeners; Why? Because most women want at least one ‘platonic male friend’ who they can hang out with socially, and have that man entertain them, and listen to them when they feel like 'venting' their frustrations about other men;

3) Men who are erotically naughty with above-average to great sex skills; Why? Even women who are semi-prudish 'good girls' want at least one man in their life that allows them to unleash their 'inner kinky freak' side. Almost all women want to be some man's kinky, submissive 'bad girl' in bed.

If you have attributes from all three categories, women will want to marry you. I have met many men who are a combination of Category #1 and #2 or Category #1 and #3, but you rarely find men who are a combination of Category #2 and #3. If a man is good in bed, he's not going to spend too much time interacting with women in a strictly platonic manner, and listen to them whine and complain about trivial bullshit (particularly about other men).

I boldly stood up and closed her office door.

Me: "What time are your co-workers do back in the office?"

Her: "It is only me and my boss. She is due back sometime between 12:50pm and 12:55pm …"

I looked at my watch, and it was almost 12:25pm. I gave Charmaine a nice, long, seductive stare. She knew what time it was. I gestured for her to get up out of her seat and join me toward the back of the office. She hesitated for a second.

She then moved toward me slowly and seductively. Next thing you know, she and I were tongue kissing in an erotic manner. I started lightly pinching her nipples, and then I moved my way down toward that nice juicy ass of hers. I could not stop squeezing her ass. Then, I leaned her against this small table that had an old-fashioned electronic typewriter on it.

I started to slowly slide down her white leggings, but she quickly asked me did I have some protection. I did. More often than not, I usually carry at least one, if not two condoms with me just about everywhere I go.

I put on the condom, and then I bent her over and I started fucking her doggie-style, slapping her ass like crazy. Her ass was not only round, but it was butter soft.

Later, I held my left hand on to her left shoulder, and used my right hand to "muffle" her moans, because she was on the verge of being loud. Even though I was enjoying myself, there was a small part of me that me that was paranoid. I kept feeling like someone was going to walk in that office any second. We were definitely taking a risk. I then released my hand from her mouth so I could talk dirty to her.

Me: "Who is fucking you…"

Her (soft and submissive): "(moan) … Alan is fucking me…"

Me: "Oooooh … Say it again …"

Her: "Alan is (moan) … fucking me …"

Me: "You want me to cum…"

Her: "Yes … I want you to cum Alan … I want you to cum …"

Me: "Oooooh … Say it again …"

She repeated it again, and seconds before I was about to cum, I pulled out of her pussy, took off my condom, and shot my cum all over her nice, soft ass. Guess what? About literally four or five minutes after we finished and cleaned up, her boss returned to the office. We both looked at each other with an expression of "Whew. That was close."

Quick lessons to take away from this experience of mine:

- Some men think the only place to have sex with women is in the woman's bedroom or in the man's bedroom. I have had sex with women in a number of different places, including many public venues. I once received a blowjob in a 24-hour grocery store in Bloomington, Indiana, and also once in one of the stairwells of LAX airport. Once you get a woman sexually aroused, you can potentially have sex with her anytime and anywhere. Think outside the box.

- If you are going to engage in casual sex with new and different acquaintances, you should always make it a habit to practice safe sex habits in order to prevent unwanted pregnancies or sexually transmitted diseases. Even when you are really, really horny and being really, really spontaneous, there is no excuse for being sexually irresponsible. Don't be stupid.

- Whenever you engage women in a sexually provocative conversation, never behave apologetic or defensive for being verbally erotic with a woman or using erotically explicit language with her, even if she harshly criticizes you for doing so. As much as possible, talk about sex with women in a very calm, relaxed, confident, unapologetic, upfront, straightforwardly honest, matter-of-fact manner. Never 'freak out' on your own X-rated conversation with a woman simply because the woman is caught off guard by your erotic candor.

Alan Roger Currie

My Mode One Experience with an R&B star:
Alan Roger Currie gets rejected, but still concludes the conversation with a smile

General Premise: During a visit to a bookstore in Westwood, California, I exhibit Mode One Behavior with a woman who was a popular R & B singer and songwriter in the late 1980s and most of the 1990s

Rating on the 1 to 5 Inhibited VS Uninhibited Scale: Woman was a firm, genuine "4" (at least in my perception)

Major Justification for Resistance: Was romantically involved with someone during the time of our interaction

Many of my close friends know this story all too well. It is very rare when a book author who fancies himself as a "dating coach" would highlight a conversation and interaction with a woman that resulted in him being rejected in the end, but I have to say, of all of the women who failed to reciprocate my sexual desires and interests, this one stands out as probably one of my Top 3 most memorable rejections.

I always tell my male supporters: The thing I love most about exhibiting Mode One Behavior as opposed to exhibiting Mode Two Behavior or Mode Three Behavior is that you rarely, if ever feel agitated, frustrated, or bitter when you get rejected.

Whenever I have exhibited Mode Two or Mode Three Behavior toward women in the past, and I got rejected, I always ended up feeling very pissed off. Always. I cannot recall even one time when I felt pissed off after being rejected by a woman during an instance where I exhibited Mode One Behavior toward her.

The year was either 1996 or 1997. I was at one of my favorite bookstores (as I mentioned on page 102, bookstores used to be one of my favorite public venues for meeting women), which was on the Southwest corner of Westwood Boulevard and Pico Street, near the popular Westside Pavilion.

I used to frequent this bookstore an average of 2-3 times per week, every week. I love to read. I think too many young people today are addicted to television, DVDs, and mp3 players. Not enough young men and women truly love to read. I love good books, but mostly non-fiction. I rarely read fiction.

On this particular day, I was going in different isles browsing through different books, when I see this sistah with some of the tightest jeans on ever. She had on a turtleneck sweater with a jean jacket over it and leather boots. She also had on very dark sunglasses, so I really could not evaluate the body language of her eyes. She had deep chocolate skin.

I watched her for a while to see if she was in the store by herself, or with another woman or a possible male companion. Minutes later, I make a move to approach her.

I approach her in a very self-assured manner and say, “So … when would you like to share my company … (pause) … next Friday? Next Saturday? The following weekend?” She looks up and smirks at me. I still cannot see her eyes because her sunglasses were really, really dark.

Her: “And hello to you too …”

I chuckle a bit. I just look at her, hoping she will take off her sunglasses.

Her: “That is a very unique, straight-to-the-point approach you have …”

Me: “I am Alan … and you are …”

She seemed a bit hesitant to tell me her name. She paused for a few seconds.

Her: "You can call me … Regina …"

I got the impression from her response that this was a pseudonym or middle name she was giving me. I would find out a few minutes later why she didn't reveal her real name.

Me: "So Regina … those jeans you are wearing are causing all sorts of naughty thoughts in my head…."

Her: "Is that right …"

Me: "That's right. (pause) So … are you and I hooking up next Friday or next Saturday …"

Her: "I don't usually 'hook up' with men I don't know. I don't know anything about you other than the fact that you told me your first name is Alan. Tell me something interesting about yourself Alan…"

Me: "I grew up in Gary, Indiana … same city as The Jackson Five … been out here in L.A. for about two-and-a-half, three years … pursuing a career as a screenwriter and filmmaker … and I sometimes get paid to write erotic fantasies for women…"

Her: "Oh really…. Hmmm. You must be good at writing those erotic fantasies if you are getting paid for it. Good for you Alan. (pause) and everyone knows where Gary, Indiana is (she giggles) Even without the Jacksons reference."

Me: "Not true Regina … I've had at least a handful of people out here ask me where Gary was…"

Her: "So let me ask you … when you invite women to 'hook up' with you, what do you usually do? Take them to the movies? Take them out to lunch or dinner? Or do you just invite them over to your place and try to make out with them?"

Me (smirks): “Usually, along the lines of the latter option. (intentional pause) Take you for example. The #1 thing I want to do with you is lean you against a wall, slowly slide down those tight jeans of yours to your knees or ankles, and fuck you silly doggie-style….”

She finally dropped her sunglasses down from her eyes to the bottom of her nose. I had grabbed her attention with my last response. Then, I found myself shocked. Turns out, this woman who went by the name “Regina” was actually not named Regina at all. I KNEW THIS WOMAN. She was a very popular R & B singer and songwriter who had been on a popular syndicated television show in the US entitled Soul Train, as well as MTV and many other shows. She had a number of hit R&B records. She used to be in a group, but now she was solo.

I’m not going to use her real name in this story, but I will call her “Vanessa” (no, not Vanessa Williams). We both stared at each other for a bit, looking directly into each other’s eyes.

Me (low volume voice): “Hey … you are …”

Her (abruptly cutting me off): “Yes … I am she.”

Me: “Pleasure to meet you… huge fan of your music …”

I’ll confess: Once I recognized who this was, I sort of felt like, “Maybe I should have came at her different,” but the reality is, she is a regular woman just like any other female. No need to treat her “differently” or with any more cautiousness simply because she was an Entertainment Industry celebrity.

I do believe if I had recognized her from the beginning, nine times out of ten, I probably would have either avoided approaching her at all, or I would have settled for a conventional Mode Two approach. Sadly, I probably would have allowed her fame and popularity to ‘intimidate’ me a bit.

It is funny how a lot of men, including myself occasionally, allow ourselves to be easily ‘intimidated’ by a woman’s looks, her sex appeal, her level of education, her level of career success, or her level of fame and popularity.

Her: "Wow. I don't know what to say. I am almost speechless…"

Me: "The key word is 'almost.' (pause) So … next Friday or next Saturday …"

Her: "(giggles a bit) And there you go … right back into your 'let's hook up next weekend' routine. You are too funny Alan."

Me: "Vanessa … a.k.a. Regina … you were supposed to say, 'Alan .. you are so damn sexy'…"

Her: "(giggles) You are really special. I mean, really. (pause) You know what though? I'm gonna tell you something Alan, and I mean this. Your approach is very refreshing.."

Me: "Translation: I want to hook up with you next Saturday Alan…"

Her: "(giggles) No, seriously Alan. You have no idea how many corny ass pick-up lines I hear on a weekly basis. It is really annoying. Now your approach? If you are looking to connect with a woman seriously and emotionally, you might scare a woman off. You'll leave her thinking that you are way out there (i.e., extremely kinky and promiscuous). But if your thing is just (casual) sex? For that, I love your approach. I really do. You cut through the B.S. We need more men out here who cut through the B.S. I hate B.S. I like it when a man lets me know exactly where he is coming from, exactly how he rolls, and exactly what he wants from me. Keep it real. And you Alan, you most definitely keep it real. I really respect you for that…"

Me: "Wow. I am flattered Vanessa. I appreciate the flattering feedback…"

Her: "I meant every word. You keep being you Alan. You are one of the most real bruthas I have ever met. Real talk."

Me: “So … does that mean we are not hooking up next Saturday?

Her: “(smiles hard) No, sorry Alan … I am involved with someone at the moment. And besides, you might be too much for me. I don’t know if I could handle you. (giggles)”

Me: “You could, and you know you could. But I respect love. I respect relationships. So since you are already ‘involved’ with someone, I will simply say it was a pleasure meeting you, keep up the good work with your music, and I hope we run into each other again…”

Her: “It was a pleasure meeting you as well Alan. Keep everything on the real. Do you baby even if others don’t like it or criticize you for it. Do you. Take care.”

After the conversation was over, I was glad that I had been Mode One with her. I loved Vanessa’s spirit and feedback. Even though we did not end up hooking up sexually, I still was glad she and I had the opportunity to converse, if only briefly.

Quick lessons to take away from this experience of mine:

- Do not ever allow any of women’s attributes to ‘intimidate’ you (e.g., her beauty, intelligence, sex appeal, level of education, fame, wealth, etc.) Women are women. Some will be interested in sharing your company, some will not. Always make an effort to approach every woman you are attracted to with a boat load of boldness, confidence, and self-assurance, unless you know ahead of time that they are married or romantically involved with someone.

- When you approach a woman, and express your romantic or sexual desires, interests and intentions to them in a Mode One style manner, rejection will usually not faze you at all. Never allow the fear of negative reactions or the fear of rejection to prevent you from approaching a woman of interest.

Verbal Seduction Story #5

The Aural Sex Seduction Method:
Alan Roger Currie uses phone sex to create instantaneous sexual chemistry in-person

General Premise: In this story, I offer at least one example of how I tend to use hot, kinky phone sex as a precursor to connecting with women face-to-face and developing sexual chemistry in-person

Rating on the 1 to 5 Inhibited VS Uninhibited Scale: Woman was a "3" pretending to be a "5"

Major Justification for Resistance: Believed that all men should 'wine & dine' women and be involved in a long-term monogamous relationship prior to engaging in sex

I rarely, if ever, "brag" about my ability to please and satisfy a woman in bed. There have been many times when I thought my performance in bed was "five stars," only to find out my female partner thought my performance was only three-and-a-half to four stars. A man's ego is typically going to lead him to believe that his sexual prowess is much better than it really is.

If there is one area though where I would have to push a lot of my modesty to the side, and do a little lighthearted bragging on myself, it would be in the area of getting women sexually aroused and getting women to masturbate over the phone.

Someone once told me years ago, "You know you have a talent for something if either a) you are able to take a task or a skill, and make it look 'easy,' while other people struggle to perform that same task or execute that same skill, or b) if you do something so well, that others are willing to pay you money to do it." There have been times in the past where I have actually been financially compensated by women to be a regular or semi-regular phone sex partner. I have even had a few of my female friends call me “the phone sex equivalent to a gigolo or a pimp.”

I think if you took an informal poll of all of my former sex partners, the vast majority of them would probably rank my “talking dirty” skills as the best they have experienced. Many of my ex-girlfriends and former lovers have said I was the most verbally kinky man they had ever been with in their life.

I love to get women aroused by talking dirty to them. Absolutely love it. If you gave me a choice between getting a woman sexually aroused by kissing them, caressing and touching them, giving them a massage, having them watch a porno movie, or talking dirty to them, I would choose talking dirty to them hands down.

If I had to offer a rough estimate, I would say between 1993 and 2011, I have had phone sex with over 1,500 women. I can name more than a few months where I had phone sex with as many as 20 new and different women in one month (and again, I am not referring to “1-900#” type phone sex … I’m talking phone sex with REAL women who are not getting paid to do it).

I have had women offer comments like, “Alan, you have a natural talent and uncanny knack for getting women’s pussies wet with your voice. With most men, talking dirty is an enjoyable hobby. With you, talking dirty is an art form.”

Some men frown on phone sex, while others say it does nothing for them. Same with women. Some women I’ve met love phone sex, some women hate phone sex, and others are somewhat indifferent toward the activity and suggest that they cannot get off from it.

I love phone sex. I would not go as far as to say I love it more than intercourse or receiving a good blowjob, but those two activities aside, phone sex is definitely a close third.

I would argue that I probably have more confidence in my ability to get a woman wet over the phone in my very first conversation with them than I do in my ability to get a woman wet in-person in my very first conversation with them.

Why? Because there are too many variables that affect a woman's sexual arousal in-person, and in particular, during the very first conversation or interaction.

In-person, a woman is going to study your height, your weight, the structure and symmetry of your face, the quality of clothes you are wearing, how confident your demeanor is, your level of eye contact, and the manner in which you move and walk. These are just a few of the factors can positively or negative affect your ability to get a woman wet in-person.

With phone sex, it is all about the tone and quality of your voice, your use of words, and your overall conversational skills. Not much else. With phone sex, either you "got it" or you don't.

With physical sex, I think there are three women in my life where I was their "first" (i.e., the man who caused them to lose their virginity). With phone sex, there are probably 550-600+ women that would describe me as the very first man to cause them to reach orgasm via self-pleasure over the phone.

I have even had phone sex with many women who initially presented themselves as bona fide, confirmed prudes. I have had phone sex with women who initially said they were not even into masturbation. I have had phone sex with women who initially told me that they "absolutely" had to be in a man's physical presence in order to get sexually aroused.

Not only have I enjoyed many 'one-on-one' episodes of phone sex, but at least one out of every five or six of my episodes of phone sex have been "phone sex threesomes." I love listening to two (or more) women play with their pussies for me at the same time.

Let's keep it real: What form of sex is more "safe" than phone sex? You cannot get a woman pregnant, and you cannot pass along any sexually transmitted diseases during an episode of phone sex. You are just using the power of your words, your voice, and your imagination, while listening to the voice and words of the person who you are on the phone with.

Beginning with probably 1994 or 1995, I would estimate that probably five out of every seven women who I have had physical sex with, I also had phone sex with them at least once prior to our physical intimacy. I would say starting with 2001, my rate probably goes up to six out of every seven.

Over the last ten years, kinky phone sex has probably been my #1 form of seducing women into having (physical) sex with me. I meet most of my phone sex partners one of two ways: Either a) I meet women first in-person, then later, I end up having at least one phone sex conversation before we meet again face-to-face, or b) I first make the acquaintance of the women via the internet (e.g., Facebook, MySpace, online matchmaking sites, etc.), have phone sex with them at least two or three times, and then we eventually meet face-to-face and end up engaging in intercourse.

What is interesting to me is, over the years, I have had some of my male friends tease me for "jerking off to women's voices over the phone," but then when they see how quickly I usually end up in bed with some of those same women once we meet face-to-face, many of these same friends will say, "Alan … you da man! Can you teach me how to talk nasty to women over the phone?!? Seriously bro. You gotta teach me how to do that shit! That technique seems to work for you like a charm!"

I don't think there is necessarily anything that can act as a "100% accurate" predictor of if you and a woman are going to have above-average to great sexual chemistry, but I would argue that hot, kinky, erotic phone sex is the closest thing to it.

I can honestly say, since my mid-to-late 30s up until now, most of the women who I did not get along with over the phone, I did not get along with in-person. On the flip side, the vast majority of the women who I had great sexual chemistry with over the phone, I usually had great sexual chemistry with those same women in our face-to-face interactions.

Actually, over half of the reason why I even wrote this book was more so because of my phone sex experiences with women than my physical sex experiences with them. Most of the men who wanted me to write another book simply wanted me to give them more "dialogue examples" of me approaching women in public venues, and being Mode One with these women in an XXX-rated manner (such as Verbal Seduction Story #2 and #3).

On the other hand, a lot of my female friends and acquaintances had become so fascinated with the stories of many of my phone sex experiences, to the point that one of them said, "Alan, you should write a phone sex memoir entitled 'Say it Again: How Alan Roger Currie became The King of Verbal Seduction'.

Every woman I know who recommended that I write this book said, "You have to include 'Say it Again' in your title. You say that so much Alan!" As already mentioned, I say "Oooooh … Say it again…" probably more than any one phrase when I'm talking dirty to a woman or having phone sex with them. That phrase is by far my talking dirty "trademark." Not only do I use that phrase in my private life, but I even use it on my two talk radio podcast programs (The Erotic Conversationalist and Upfront & Straightforward with Alan Roger Currie)

It was hard for me to think of one story to highlight out of the many phone sex experiences I have had. Since most of my stories in this book deal with a situation where a woman gave me a lot of resistance before she finally reciprocated my desires and interests, I tried to think of a woman who not only resisted me only over the phone, or only in-person, but a woman who resisted me both over the phone AND in-person. I thought of a few women who qualified, but for this story, I am going to go with a woman who I will refer to as “Danielle.”

When I first returned from the Midwest from Los Angeles to attend to my parents’ health concerns, I found myself being a bit of a ‘social hermit.’ I just was not motivated to frequent bars, nightclubs, and other social hang outs in the Chicagoland region. I stayed at home many weekends assisting my late mother and running errands for her since she was now older and experiencing all sorts of health-related challenges.

This led to me exploring various online matchmaking services via the Internet, such as Match.com™, Love@AOL™ (specifically for America Online subscribers), and BlackPeopleMeet.com®, among other similar websites.

Many of these sites are funny to me. All throughout this book, you have heard me describe many women as a “2 pretending to be a 4 or a 5.” Online matchmaking sites are FULL of these types. They use phrases like, “I’ve already had my fun and now I am looking to settle down with a nice, financially secure gentleman who knows how to respect women.” Riiiiiiiiight. Give me a fucking break.

I have conversed with so many women who wrote profiles trying to make themselves seem sexually conservative, erotically prudish and wholeheartedly monogamous, only to find out after a few episodes of phone sex that a high percentage of these women have had some really kinky and promiscuous experiences in their past, and many of them still want to experience some hot, kinky, free-spirited sex.

Danielle was one woman I met online. She was 36, divorced with a 12-year old daughter. Danielle had an MBA from one of the top Graduate Business School programs in the nation, and she resided in an affluent suburb of Chicago.

Danielle was very attractive, with a very "old-fashioned," somewhat conservative and pretentious look about her in the photos that she uploaded to her online profile. She was very light, almost with a biracial look to her. Her hair was long and pretty, but she wore it back in a conservative bun in her photos.

Danielle had about eight photos of herself on her profile page, with most of the photos of her in business professional attire or casual business attire. No photos were of her in "at home casual wear." She listed her likes and dislikes in a man, and she seemed to be very specific in terms of what she was looking for in a romantic companion.

One of her comments was, "If you are a player type who is into lies and games, I am not the woman for you." I have never been into manipulative head games or blatant dishonesty myself, but I surely could not deny the 'player' tag.

I wrote her a private message through the site, and two or three days later, she wrote me back.

My initial message to her:

"Nice profile, although I cannot decide whether to categorize you as 'highly selective' or 'extremely nitpicky,' based on what you expressed in your profile as your criteria for a long-term companion.

I think we should get together sometime in the very near future so I can find out who you REALLY are under your seemingly very conservative public façade. The woman you are when you decide to let your hair down while at home . . .

ARC

Danielle's response a few days later:

##########

"I beg your pardon? 'public façade?' I do not put on façades. I am who I am Mr. 'ARC'. You might be a bit much for me based on what you wrote about yourself in your profile, although I like a man who is straightforward with his intentions.

I see where your preference for relationships is 'casual.' I do not do 'casual.' Only serious inquiries need apply. :) Only the men with serious intentions get to see me with my hair down. :)

However, I would not have a problem with some 'casual' chit chat with you sometime in the near future. I love to meet and talk to new people and learn something enlightening and interesting about them.

Danielle
(630) XXX-XXXX"

I think she wrote me that message on a Wednesday or Thursday, and I ended up calling Danielle that Sunday evening.

In our first phone conversation, we spent the first few minutes of the conversation just exchanging pleasantries, and asking each other the basics like, "How long have you been on this site? How many men/women have you met in-person from the site? What have been some of your experiences, both good and bad?" In other words, bullshit small talk.

The first time the conversation turned toward sex was probably about 10-15 minutes into the conversation. She asked me about my user name on the site, which was "TheBlackZalmanKing."

Her: "Who is Zalman King?"

Me: “Zalman King is considered arguably the best screenwriter in Hollywood for films with an erotic storyline. He is the king of soft porn type films.”

Her: “I don’t watch porn, but whatever floats your boat.”

Me: “I said ‘soft porn.’ He is not in the porno industry. He writes scripts for mainstream films with an erotic storyline.”

Her: “Soft porn, hardcore porn … they’re both the same to me. Porn is porn. Porn undermines the moral fabric of this country. The reason why we have so many sexual deviants running around in this country engaging in all sorts of perverted sex acts is because of the porn industry. Have you ever seen a monogamous married couple depicted in porn? No. Porn promotes irresponsible, instantaneous self-gratification.”

Me: “Wow. Okay Minister Danielle! Preach!”

Her: “I am serious Alan. I am very serious. I am not a fan of anything pornographic at all. I think all porn is disgusting smut. Porn is what creates pedophiles, rapists, and other deviants”

Me: “Aren’t we a little judgmental.”

Her: “I call it as I see it.”

Me: “So … do you have concrete evidence that all men who are pedophiles, rapists and sexual deviants have watched a lot of porn in their life?”

Her: “Everyone knows that. Everyone. The evidence is out there.”

Me: “I have watched my share of porn in my lifetime, and I have never in my life pressured or forced a woman into having sex with me. And I know many college-educated men and women who have watched porn who have normal, healthy sex lives. So, I think your criticisms are invalid and unsubstantiated, not to mention very narrow-minded and judgmental…”

Her: "Well, we will have to agree to disagree."

Me: "I would categorize this exchange as 'I'm right' and you're wrong Danielle."

Her: "Whatever. (pause) Next subject."

Me: "So … you're just a straight-up prude huh?"

Her: "Your words, not mine."

Me: "I sense an attitude!"

Her: "I don't have an attitude. Not at all. I was just telling you emphatically that I am not into porn. I think porn is disgusting and misogynistic."

Me: "Do you think sex is disgusting and misogynistic?"

Her: "Between two people in love? Of course not Alan. Of course not. I am all for two people who genuinely care about each other making love to each other"

Me: "So, in other words, you are only against casual, non-monogamous sex"

Her: "Pretty much … yes."

Me: "So, you have never, ever had sex with a man who was not your exclusive boyfriend?"

Her: "I am not getting into my past sex life with you. That is personal."

Me: "I want to get to know you personally."

Her: "I do not share details of my past sex life with men who I am not in a relationship with."

Me: "So, you don't like to talk about fucking at all…"

Her: "Excuse me?!?"

Me: "You're excused."

Her: "Did you just say what I think you said?"

Me: "I said, so you don't like talking about fucking, do you?"

Her: "Excuse you!! Please don't use that crass language with me. That is so rude. I know your parents taught you better than that. I know they did. You're an intelligent, educated man Alan, or so I thought. Please don't lower yourself to the level of the common man who has no sense of class or tact."

Half of me was getting irritated by the combination of her prudishness and pretentiousness, but the other half of me was getting excited because I knew I had a challenge on my hands. I love a good, juicy challenge.

Me: "So … you're saying that the only men who love to fuck are uneducated men with no class?"

Her: "If you use the f-word one more time, I am hanging up on you."

Me: "Well, in that case, I think you should go ahead and hang up that fucking phone of yours Danielle. Since you fucking hate the word fuck so fucking much."

There was a long pause on her end. Deep-down, I knew she wasn't going to hang up. I knew it. Don't ask me why, but I knew she wasn't going to hang up.

Here is what you have to remember about many women, and I have already alluded to this in the book: There is a big difference between a "genuine prude" and a "disingenuous or fake prude." Women who are genuine prudes do not get all self-righteous, adamant and theatrical with you. They just avoid engaging in behavior that goes against their basic principles.

"Fake prudes" on the other hand go out of their way to convince you that they are prudes. They get very melodramatic in their attempt to make you firmly believe that they are anything BUT kinky or promiscuous.

Why offer a “threat” of hanging up? Why not just hang up? I don’t think I have ever in my life said to a woman, “If you say XYZ or ABC one more time, I am going to hang up on you!!!” That is bullshit. If I feel like hanging up on someone, I simply hang up on them. I don’t first offer a ‘threat,’ and then hang up.

When women threaten to hang up on you, or threaten to ignore you, that is simply what I refer to as an “egotistical power play.” They are trying to see if they can ‘punk you’ or not. They are trying to see if they can get you to become defensive or apologetic so that they can take control of the conversation, and once you let a woman know for a fact that she is in complete control of the interactions between you and her, that woman is going to lose respect for you. In the long-run, you will never hear from that woman again.

I was not going to allow Danielle to intimidate me, or put me on the defensive. I was going to stand my ground, even if it meant her eventually hanging up on me. It was time for me to unzip my pants, and show her just how fucking big my balls were.

Me: “So are we going to just sit here … not saying anything?”

Her: “I’m waiting . . .”

Me: “Waiting for what…”

Her: “Waiting for you to apologize for your rude, crass, and unnecessary profane language…”

Me: “Then you might as well hang up now. Because otherwise, you are going to be waiting a long ass time. I am not apologizing for jack shit.”

Her: “Well, I guess I am about to let you go Mr. Currie … I don’t think we have any sort of love connection here anyway.”

Me: “Obviously. Because I’m real … and you’re full of shit.”

Her: "Full of shit?!? Full of shit?!?!? You're the one that is full of shit!!!"

Me: "Ooooooooh. I love it when a woman tells me to apologize for using profanity, and then turns around and uses profanity herself. That is so spicy and erotic . . ."

Her: "Fuck you Alan! You wanna hear me use the f-word?? Well you just heard it. Fuck you Alan!!!"

Me: "Ooooooh …. Say it again …."

Her: "What is wrong with you men? What happened to men who were gentlemen like my late father? Men who practiced chivalry and exhibited class and respect toward women?? Where are those men? Huh? Where are the GOOD men?!?"

Me: "Somewhere getting their dick sucked. Or fucking."

Her (sighs): "What is wrong with you? I know you're better than this Alan. I know you are. This cannot be the real you. Are you obsessed with sex or something?? When was the last time you got some? It must be a long time since you last had some!"

Me: "(mocking her earlier comment) I am not getting into my past sex life with you. That is personal."

Her: "No wonder you don't have a girlfriend. You're a sex addict! I'm not on this site to look for a sex partner. I can get some dick anytime I want to."

BINGO. Now we're talking. You see fellas, if this woman was a "true 5," she would have never made a comment like that. A genuine prude doesn't talk like that. Only a woman who is a "2" or "3" who is pretending to be a "4" or a "5" talks like that. I had just provoked Danielle to reveal her real behavior. If I say so myself, I have a talent for doing this.

Me: "You can get what anytime you want to …"

Her: "You heard me. Dick. I don't need to go on the internet looking to get some dick. Do you know how many men I meet who take me out to the finest restaurants in Chicago, buy me gifts, or take me on trips expecting me to give them some??"

Me: "Aren't you Ms. Modesty"

Her: "You said you were about being real. No woman who is attractive and intelligent has to beg for dick. We don't have to go on the internet looking for casual sex. Casual sex partners come a dime a dozen"

Me: "So, in other words, you have your share of dick offered to you on a weekly basis."

Her: "Of course I do…"

Me: "Say, 'I turn down good dick all the time' …"

Her: "I do. I don't have to say it. I do."

Me: "Convince me. Say it."

Her: "I'll say it once, and once only. (pause) Alan, I turn down good dick all the time"

Me (feigning as if I couldn't hear her): "I couldn't hear you … you turn down what?"

Her: "You heard me. I turn down good dick all the time…"

Me: "Oooooh …. Say it again …"

Her: "I will not. (giggles) You are a trip Alan. You are incorrigible. (giggles)"

Ah ha. I finally got her to lighten up and giggle. At this moment, it was all a piece of cake for me to work my linguistic magic with Danielle. I was now on a mission to get her pussy wet.

Her: "You know you want to say it again for me Ms. Cocky… You know you want to say, 'Alan … every single man in Chicago wants to fuck me! Don't believe me? We can make a few three-way calls right now! I will get them to confess! All of the Chicago Bears and Chicago Bulls players want to fuck me!"

Danielle starts laughing at me making fun of her.

Her: "Real cute. Real cute Alan. I am not that full of myself."

Me: "Translation: Not both teams silly. Just the Bears' players for right now. But wait until next year … I'll have the Cubs and the White Sox wanting to fuck me too…."

Her (giggling): "You are silly Alan. You are so crazy…"

Me: "Okay … say this. Say, 'Alan … I know you want to fuck me. I dare you to deny it. You want to fuck me real bad'…"

Her: "You just told on yourself. Those were your words, not mine Mr. Currie. But I do know that."

Me: "You know what…"

Her: "That you want to fuck me…."

Me: "Say it again …"

Her: "That you want to fuck me. I knew that when you gave me your number in the email"

Me: "You knew what…."

Her: "That you wanted to fuck me…."

Me: "I don't want to fuck you … I am GOING to fuck you…"

Her: "We'll see about that (pause) Are you playing with yourself Alan? Your voice sure did drop real low (giggles)"

Me: "I'm not … but what if I was? I have no problem stroking my dick listening to you talk about me fucking you…."

Her: "You are so bad…"

Me: "Say, 'Alan … you're nasty … really nasty…"

Her: "You are nasty…"

Me: "Say it …"

Her: "I just did … Alan … you are so nasty. Really nasty…"

Me: "Does your pussy taste good …"

Her: "Of course…"

Me: "Of course what…"

Her: "Of course my pussy tastes good…"

Me: "If you're a good girl Danielle, I might just lick your pussy …"

Her: "Now you're talking my language…."

Me: "Oh really. So you love to have your pussy licked huh…"

Her: "What woman doesn't? That is, if a man knows what he's doing down there. If a man is good at it, and really knows what he's doing, then I love having my pussy licked…"

Me: "You love what…."

Her: "Having my pussy licked…."

Me: "Oooooh … say it again …"

Her: "I love to have my pussy licked Alan…"

Me: "Call me Mr. Currie"

Her: "I love having my pussy licked Mr. Currie…"

Me: "Say, 'Mr. Currie, I would love to have your tongue on my pussy'…."

Her: "Mr. Currie, I would love to have you lick my pussy with your tongue…"

Me: "Now say, 'Mr. Currie, I'm sorry for getting mad at you earlier … I love to get fucked…"

Her: "I'm sorry Mr. Currie for getting an attitude with you earlier … I love to have my pussy licked … and I love to be fucked…"

Me: "Say it again…."

Her: "I love to be fucked …"

Me: "Do you love your pussy…"

Her: "Yes…."

Me: "Say 'Yes Sir'…"

Her: "Yes sir …"

Me: "Say, 'Yes sir … I love my pussy' …"

Her: "I love my pussy sir … "

Me: "You want me to love it…."

Her: "Yes sir …"

Me: "Then say it…."

Her: "I want you to love my pussy sir …"

Me: "Say, 'Sir, can I play with my pussy for you'…"

Her: "Sir … can I please play with my pussy for you…."

Me: "Oooooh …. Say it again …"

Her: "Sir … can I please play with my pussy for you…"

We continued the conversation until she pleasured herself to the point of orgasm, and so did I. Actually, I made her cum twice in that first conversation. We ended up having phone sex about four or five more times before we met up for the first time in-person. Danielle was very attractive and classy in-person.

Now, you might be thinking that the manner in which I broke Danielle down was a "once every Blue Moon" occurrence, but I break "fake prudes" down all the time. If you're thin-skinned or highly defensive, you will never break a woman like Danielle down. Never. You have to know who you are, and display your sense of backbone. Over half of success with women comes down to big balls and unbreakable backbone. Balls and backbone.

Now of course, Danielle told me things like, "I hope you don't think that because you get me wet on the phone I'm gonna be some 'easy lay' in person … I'm not a ho…" We actually did not have intercourse the first time we met in-person, although we did some heavy-duty kissing and making out. It wasn't until our second face-to-face interaction that we ended up having sex.

I doubt seriously if Danielle and I would have ended up making out during our first date and fucking during our second date if I had not laid the groundwork with hot, kinky phone sex. The phone sex is what set the tone for our face-to-face sexual chemistry.

Danielle told me that I was the first man she ever had sex with who had not taken her to a fancy restaurant, or generally had not 'wined and dined' her prior to sex. I rarely take women on expensive dates before I have sex with them. Not my style.

I have met a lot of "Danielle types" in my life. They put up a prudish façade because they either think that will improve their chances of finding a husband, or at minimum, they do not want a man to "hit it and quit it" and leave them emotionally devastated in the long-run.

This is why I told Danielle from the beginning that I wasn't really looking for anything long-term or monogamous, and she respected my upfront, straightforward honesty about that. When we stopped seeing each other sexually, there was no animosity or ill feelings between us at all, which is how it should be with all interactions between men and women.

Even after we stopped having sex, we remained in contact. About 18-24 months after we stopped seeing each other, she met some guy and got engaged. Good for her.

Quick lessons to take away from this experience of mine:

- Very few women 35 years of age or older join online matchmaking sites looking for one-night stands or weekend flings. Most of these women are either looking for their future husband, a new boyfriend, or at minimum, a long-term "fuck buddy." Knowing that, do not 'pretend' to want a long-term monogamous relationship with these women when you know you just want two or three days of casual sex. Be upfront and honest with them if you are just looking to get laid.

- Don't ever allow a woman to 'bully' you or threaten you into modifying your behavior for the sole and specific purpose of pleasing her and accommodating her. Once you play a woman's game, and allow them to completely take control of their interactions with you, in the long-run, those women are going to lose respect for you, and more than likely, you will never hear from those women again. Be your own man. In the long-run, success with women is all about showing women how big your balls are and how unbreakable your backbone is.

- Watching adult films is okay when you do it occasionally, but you never want to allow yourself to become obsessed or addicted to porn to the point where it can ruin your natural sense of eroticism and sexual chemistry with a woman, and create erectile dysfunction problems when having intercourse while in a relationship. Be wise in your viewing habits with porn.

Alan Roger Currie

Verbal Seduction Story #6

The best wingman a friend can have:
Alan Roger Currie uses Mode One Behavior in order to score a threesome for a friend

General Premise: Not only have I used the power of Mode One Behavior and verbal eroticism to seduce women into having sex with me, but on occasion, I have often used the power of erotically explicit words and conversation to persuade women to have sex with friends of mine

Rating on the 1 to 5 Inhibited VS Uninhibited Scale:
One woman was a genuine "1" while the other was a "2" pretending to be a "3"

Major Justification for Resistance: The woman who was a "1" did not have any justifications for resistance; The woman who was a "2" pretending to be a "3" behaved as though she did not believe in the idea of group sex or sex with strangers

Are you familiar with the term "wingman" (or "wingwoman," since I have had both in my life). In case you are totally ignorant to what that term means, a 'wingman' is a friend that does everything in his power to make sure that a buddy of his either a) meets some desirable women while out socializing; b) has an enjoyable, successful double date with a woman and one of her close girlfriends; or c) gets laid after going to a bar, nightclub, or other desirable social event.

The basic idea of a really good wingman would be a guy who acts as sort of your romantic or sexual "public relations" person, a "talent scout," and a 'gatekeeper' who prevents potential "drama" from ensuing.

Entertainment Industry celebrities primarily use "P.R." people to 'toot their horn' for them. If all celebrities went around tooting their own horns, they would all look egotistical and self-centered (which, realistically, is what most celebrities are).

In a way, the same concept exists in the world of dating and relationships, and particularly in regard to getting women to have sex with you. Sometimes you need a “hype” man.

Let’s say, I had a friend named ‘Tony,’ and Tony wants to approach a woman in a nightclub, and tell this woman that he is a prolific womanizer who gets laid with a number of hot women who he meets at the nightclub. Some women might get curious about his sex skills, but many other women would probably get immediately turned off by his seemingly egotistical, braggadocios style, and end up rejecting him.

Now let’s say instead of Tony bragging on himself, I approach some women that my friend Tony has handpicked, and I am the one who approaches these women and says things like, “I sure would love for you to meet my friend Anthony. He’s a charming and intelligent guy. Now I have to warn you though … he is pretty popular with the ladies. I’ve seen him pull some really hot women from this very club, and I’m talking, those women were all over him. The guy is just a natural ladies’ man. But you didn’t hear that from me….”

That sort of comment can go in one of two directions: Some women, as I already alluded to, could potentially end up turned off by the fact that he is an incorrigible ladies’ man and womanizer. On the other hand, some women might become very “curious” and “intrigued” about his popularity with other women. Why the latter?

If you don’t know already, I’m going to let you in on a little secret: Popularity with women attracts attention from even more women. Put in more blunt terms, pussy attracts pussy. Just like most people believe that when you are already wealthy, you tend to attract even more opportunities to add to your wealth, the same general concept works in relation to attracting sexual companionship from women.

When women see or hear about your popularity with other women, it generally tends to make them curious about WHY you are so popular with other women. Most women tend to usually assume one of three things: That either 1) you are very funny, witty, and charming, and you have a natural knack for keeping women entertained; 2) you are wealthy, and you love spending money on women in a very generous manner; or 3) you are very, very good in bed and leave the women you fuck feeling very pleased and satisfied.

My own late mother even acknowledged the above three assumptions, including #3, although she expressed it in more formal terms. She once said, "No woman wants a man who she feels very few other women want to spend time with. Women are usually most attracted to men who they feel are highly desired by other women." Some dating coaches, pick up artist types, and seduction gurus refer to this concept as a man having "high social market value" or "social proof."

I can honestly say that for most of my adult life, the #1 time that I tended to have women offer me pussy on a "silver platter" were during those times when women knew that my attention and companionship was in high demand from other women.

This is one of the reasons why it is so hard for many men to resist cheating. I do not condone cheating or encourage it, but I will say this: There are some women in society that will completely ignore you until they see you with a very beautiful, sexy girlfriend, fiancée, or wife. Then, all of the sudden, these women who previously ignored you want to spend time with you. Some women are funny that way.

Most men with really gorgeous wives and girlfriends will confirm this. They know I'm telling the truth. Many women will just throw pussy at you when they know that you are being sexually satisfied by either one very beautiful woman who is your steady companion, or by a number of attractive, sexy women who are your casual “fuck buddies.”

Going back to the wingman concept, what a good wingman or wingwoman does is converse with prospects of yours before you do in order to identify the women who may potentially be interested in you, but he/she also ‘weeds out’ those prospects who have absolutely no interest in you, and would end up rejecting you or wasting your time.

Whenever I have acted as a wingman for a close friend, this is exactly what I do. I converse with my friend’s “women of interest” or “prospects,” and I try to gauge how much interest they would have in either dating my friend, or having (casual) sex with my friend. If they seem to be not interested at all, the conversation is usually very short.

I have had many male friends over the years compliment my ability to help them seduce women and sleep with women. I would estimate that there have been at least eight or nine male friends who I have been a wingman for. Being a wingman is like the seduction equivalent to being a good “assist” man on the basketball court. Like former NBA legend Magic Johnson or current NBA star Chris Paul. You set your friends up to score.

I had a few friends just flat out call me a “pimp.” They would say things like, “Alan … you get me more pussy than I get myself. I don’t know what you say to some of these women, but you have had women ready to fuck me before they have even had talked to me at length in-person or over the phone.”

I have a buddy in Chicago who I went to high school with named Carleton. When we were in our 20s, Carleton and I would always play off of each other as wingmen. Instead of him trying to always get some pussy for himself, and me trying to always get some pussy for myself, at least half of the time that we went out to parties and nightclubs, we would make it a point to try to score sexual companionship for each other.

When I lived in Los Angeles, I had two female friends that would sometimes act as a 'wingwoman' for me. I would go to parties and nightclubs with them, and they would sing my praises to other women about my level of kinkiness or my sexual prowess. Next thing you know, many of these women would want to be introduced to me.

I'm going to quickly give you two examples; One example of what a wingwoman might do for me, and another example of what I would do for a male friend as his wingman.

Darlene: "See that guy over there …"
Woman: "Yeah …"
Darlene: "That is my good friend Alan Roger Currie … "
Woman: "Alan huh? Your boyfriend or just a good friend?"
Darlene: "Just a good friend. I would introduce you to him, but I know he's just going to play the 'role' with you…."
Woman: "What do you mean by that?"
Darlene: "He's going to try to act like a 'nice guy' and a well-mannered gentleman with you. He's not going to be the 'real' Alan with you…"
Woman: "What do you mean, the 'real' Alan?"
Darlene: "The real Alan is kinky as hell. I mean, a total freak. Women call him the 'one who makes you squirt'…"
Woman (blushing): "Really? Wow. I have never had a man make me squirt during sex before…"
Darlene: "Never? Ever? Well shit …. Maybe I should introduce you to Alan. But like I said, he's going to be phony toward you until he gets to know you and trusts you. Women are always blowin' up that man's phone looking to squirt…."

You see what just happened?

Now, I am in a situation where I can talk to the woman who Darlene just finished talking to, and I'll be able to converse with her with ease, and even if I talk about basic, boring bullshit, somewhere in the back of that woman's mind, she's going to be thinking about me fucking her, and fucking her so good and making her cum so hard to the point where she is going to be ready to 'squirt' pussy juice all over my dick. The "catch" is, if I sleep with this woman, and I fail to make her squirt or cum real hard, I lose all credibility. So I would have to deliver on the "hype" that Darlene set up for me in this woman's mind.

(Note: There are actually a group of women in the US who started a company that centers on this concept; Men pay them $$$ to act as companions and wingwomen at parties, nightclubs, and various social events).

Alan Roger Currie (me) acting as a wingman for a friend:

Me: "You doing okay tonight?"
Woman: "I'm good. You?"
Me: "Just helping a friend of mine celebrate his new job promotion"
Woman: "Oh, great. Good for him."
Me: "Matter of fact … see that guy in the navy blue business suit and red tie?" (pointing at my friend)
Woman: "Oh, sure. I see him."
Me: "That's my friend Double J. Really cool guy."
Woman: "Have you two been friends for long?"
Me: "Oh, for sure. He's like a brother to me. That's my main man. He always looks out for me. (pause) Like I remember one time, I was dejected because my ex-girlfriend and I broke up, and not only did he make sure I was okay and in good spirits, but one night, he had one of his obedient lady friends come over and 'take care' of a brutha, if you feel my meaning…"
Woman (blushing): "Obedient lady friend? You mean, he told her to have sex with you?? Wow. That's a trip. What a good friend. What's his name again?"

Me: "Yep. He and I love obedient women. (pause) You know what … I should have never told you that story. Now, you're gonna think he's some sort of pimp. He's really a conservative guy, but he just has a knack for getting women to drop their panties for him whenever he wants them to…"

Woman (giggles): "Oh REALLY? What is his secret? How does he get so many women to just drop their panties for him?"

Me: "I can't tell you all of Double J's secrets, now can I? What kind of friend would that make me? You already know too much. If I introduce you to him right now, he will pretend like he's as prudish as a Sunday School teacher. But beneath that innocent exterior, Double J is a raw animal. He would take you in the bathroom right now, slide that dress up that you have on, and fuck you silly …"

Woman (blushing like crazy): "Oh my God!! I don't' believe you just said that. So your friend is that freaky huh? Interesting…. Very interesting…"

In that situation, my friend would have to say something really stupid to fuck up that perfect set-up. All I have to do is introduce my friend to this woman, and in the back of her mind, all she's going to be thinking about is my buddy sliding up her dress and fucking her nice, slow and easy in the bathroom.

See how the art of being a wingman or wingwoman works?

Now some men and women reading this portion might say, "Doesn't being a wingman or a wingwoman involve some degree of deception and misleading, manipulative behavior? I thought Mode One is about upfront, straightforward honesty? How do you reconcile the two Alan?"

When you are being a good wingman, it's not like you're "lying" to a woman, or giving her the misleading impression that your friend is someone that he's not. For example, if I approached a woman, and told her that my friend had a 13" inch cock and he was a multi-millionaire, when in reality, he was broke, unemployed with a five-inch dick, that would be lying. I would never do that.

Or, if I gave a woman the impression that a friend of mine wanted a long-term, monogamous relationship when I knew he just wanted casual sex, that would be misleading and manipulative. I would never do that.

Being a wingman simply involves you singing the praises of your friend, and highlighting various aspects of their romantic behavior or sexual prowess. The only aspect of being a wingman or wingwoman that is a little bit "deceptive" or "misleading" is that you are 'pretending' that your friend "doesn't know" you are saying flattering things about him behind his back to women, when in reality, he usually does know. Again, I do not tell women blatant lies about my friends.

Probably the best story I can remember of being a great wingman was in Manhattan Beach, California in the late 1990s. I had a buddy named Bruce, and it was his birthday weekend. Bruce was a ladies' man type. Bruce, who was biracial, dated women of any and all races. Black, White, Asian, Hispanic.

It was a Saturday evening, and I arrive at Bruce's place, but he seems sort of ticked off. I ask him what is wrong, and he says that he had a potential ménage-a-trois set up with one woman he had already fucked and a close girlfriend of hers, who he had never fucked. The second woman ended up getting nervous jitters, so she flaked out on him, and then later, so did the woman Bruce had already been intimate with.

So, Bruce was like, "Let's go out and have some fun and hopefully, we'll get laid…" We went out to a local bar/nightclub in the South Bay region of Los Angeles. It was a good, diverse crowd when we arrived. There were almost twice as many women in the club as there were men. I told Bruce to drink it up, because I would be driving (I'm not the biggest drinker in the world, but I do love me a good Long Island Iced Tea)

Instead of allowing Bruce to sulk about his lost opportunity for a ménage-a-trois, I let Bruce know that I was going to come through for him as a wingman. Bruce says, "Naw man … you just concentrate on having a good time. I'll get on one of these fine ass honeys up in here…," but I wanted to help my man out.

Sure enough, I started evaluating the "talent" in the club, looking for 'targets' (prospects / women of interest). After about thirty minutes or so, I had identified at least ten potential targets. Any woman I saw in groups of four or more, I ignored. I rarely approach a woman in a nightclub, bar, or similar social venue when she is with three or more people.

I usually only approach women who are either a) by themselves, or b) with one, no more than two girlfriends who are accompanying them. These are the women who I find that tend to be the most receptive when you approach them.

I approached about two or three women who quickly blew me off. No biggie. Rejection has never fazed me. My first connection was with the fourth woman I approached. She was a very attractive Caucasian Blonde. A bit more Bruce's type than mine, but make no mistake – I would've fucked her silly.

Amber was her name, and we started a conversation near the bar. At first, she looked to be there alone, but later she said she was there with her roommate. We talked for three or four minutes just about the club itself, and how packed it was.

Amber told me that she and her roommate, Tiffany, lived in Playa Del Rey, California. She had rhythm, because she kept dancing to hip hop songs near the bar. Amber's voice did not match her face. She looked like she would have this very 'bimbo' like perky voice, but her voice was deep and resonate. She was very articulate. We enjoyed a good four minutes of conversation before I went into full throttle "wingman mode."

Her: "You here alone Alan?"

Me: “Nope. I am here with a buddy of mine. (points on the dance floor to Bruce) Right there. In the white shirt and jeans”

Her (looking at Bruce): “Oh, okay. I feel like I’ve seen him in here before”

Me: “He’s a frequent patron of this club. This is only my second or third time here. He loves this place. And this is his birthday weekend.”

Her: “Oh really? Well tell him I said Happy Birthday!”

Me: “You should tell him yourself. I’ll bring him over here after he finishes dancing. Although, he might be still a wee bit depressed…”

Her: “Why would he be depressed?”

Me: “I could tell you … but then I’d have to kill you … (smirking)”

Her: “Is it top secret?!? Now you have me curious!!”

Me: “No, it’s really no big deal … Okay Amber, I’m going to trust you … okay?”

Her: “I won’t tell.”

Me: “Bruce was supposed to have a kinky threesome with these two hot women, but at the last minute, they flaked out on him…”

Her: “Reeeally. Wow. Now that is very interesting. Why did the women flake out on him?”

Me: “I have no idea. But right now, he could’ve been at his place having two women taking turns sucking his dick”

Amber playfully takes my left hand, and lightly slaps the back of it to let me know I was using ‘naughty language.’

Her: “You are a bad boy Alan. Bad boy. (slaps my hand)”

Me: “Like you don’t suck dick….”

Her (giggles): “I never said that I did or did not …”

Me: “I can tell you love to suck dick…”

Once again, she takes my hand and slaps it playfully.

Her: “You are so bad Alan!! Bad boy!”

Me: “When my buddy Bruce comes over here, give him a hug and let him know that you are here for him…”

Her: “That I am ‘here for him’??”

Me: “He’s going to try to play it off, but he really is dejected about those women flaking out on him. So let him know that you are here for him to make sure he has an enjoyable evening. Cool? My friend needs a birthday blowjob from an attractive woman like you …”

Her: “You and this blowjob obsession! How do you know that your friend wouldn’t prefer to bury his head in between my legs and eat me out?”

Now, it was my turn to take Amber’s hand and slap it.

Me: “Oooooh. You’re nasty. (pause) I love nasty women…”

Her (giggles): “Of course you do…”

At this moment, Bruce comes back near the bar. I introduce him to Amber.

Me: “I was just telling Amber that you love to come here…”

Bruce (to Amber): “Pleasure to meet you Amber … Are you a regular here at the club?”

Her (to Bruce): “Kinda, sorta. Haven’t we met in here before?”

Bruce: “I don’t recall, but maybe…”

Her: "Well, your friend Alan here told me about the two women who let you down tonight.…Sorry to hear about that …"

Bruce feigns as if he is surprised. Bruce gives me a playful glare. Amber giggles and I can tell she's checking Bruce out.

Bruce "You have a big mouth Al …"

Me (to Amber): "You have a big mouth Amber…."

Her: "I love to kiss and tell …"

Me (to Bruce): "Speaking of big mouths, Amber and I were just talking about blowjobs … she loves to suck dick…"

Amber gets playfully riled up.

Her: "I didn't say that!! You are putting words in my mouth!"

Me: "No, Bruce and I want to put our dick in your mouth … not words…"

Amber goes to do her hand-slapping routine again, but I pull my hand away.

Her: "You are so bad Alan!!"

Me: "Okay, if you don't like to suck dick … look Bruce dead in his eyes, and say, 'Bruce … even if you paid me $100.00 right now, I would not suck your dick'…"

Amber gives me this "You are so bad!" look. She hesitates, but then she says it.

Her: "Bruce … if you paid me $100.00 … I would suck your dick so damn good, you would never want another woman's lips and mouth wrapped around your dick ever again…"

Her: "(giggles) I'm just playing!"

Me: “No you’re not. You know good and well you would suck Bruce’s dick even without $100.00 … you would suck it for free…”

Her (giggles): “I would need at least $50 …”

Me (whispering in Amber’s ear): “Now be really, really naughty for Alan and whisper in Bruce’s ear … tell him that you really do want to suck his dick as a birthday present to him…”

Amber does not even hesitate. She moves closer to Bruce, and whispers in Bruce’s ear. Bruce gives me a “thumbs up” as if to say, “Good job bro.”

Those two begin talking, and soon, they are on the dance floor grinding on each other. Minutes later, Amber’s roommate Tiffany comes near me with some guy.

Tiffany: “Wasn’t my roommate Amber talking to you a minute ago?”

Me: “She’s on the dance floor with my buddy Bruce”

To my surprise, Tiffany reaches in her purse and gives me $25.00 I look at her like, “what is this for?”

Tiffany: “Can you tell Amber that I am about to leave? Please give her this for cab fare. I am leaving right now….”

From the looks of it, Tiffany’s roommate found her a guy she wanted to sleep with, and she was actually leaving the club to fuck this guy. I was like, “can’t you go out to the dance floor and tell Amber yourself?” Tiffany’s response was, “But then Amber will try to talk me out of leaving….” I said, “Oh, so you don’t want her cock-blocking…” Tiffany laughed.

I took the $25.00 and told Tiffany that I would give it to Amber. Then Tiffany and her newfound sex partner left the club.

Fast forward to about 15 minutes later, two sistahs come near the bar. There weren't that many Black women in the club that night … maybe six or seven total. I gave the two sistahs eye contact to see how receptive they were. They both smiled. Soon, I struck up a conversation. One was named Debra, and the other, Tracey.

I asked them were they "regulars" of this club, or was this their first or second time. Tracey said it was her first time, but Debra said she had been in the club about six or seven times before.

Similar to Amber, they asked me was I there alone. I told them I was there with Bruce, and then I pointed at Bruce dancing with Amber on the dance floor.

Debra immediately started raving about Bruce. She was like, "He is fine… he looks like Jeffrey Sams!" I was like, "Who is Jeffrey Sams?" She said he was some actor who was in the movie, Soul Food. I couldn't decide which one I was going to hit on, but since Debra seemed to be more smitten with my buddy Bruce, I immediately turned my attention to Tracey. Tracey was the more conservative looking of the two. She really did not look like the type to frequent nightclubs. Tracey seemed like the quiet, shy type. Conversely, Debra had more of a "party girl" flair about her. Both of them were attractive.

Once I started conversing with Tracey, Debra kept interrupting me with questions about Bruce. "Is he single? Is he married? Is that his girlfriend he's dancing with? Does he only date white women?" Etc., etc., etc. Debra was behaving as if she was ready to go out on the dance floor, and jump on Bruce immediately. She was really hot for Bruce. The problem was, I had already created chemistry between Bruce and Amber.

Finally, I was like, "Why don't you go over there and make a sandwich out of him. I will give you $5 if you start dancing behind him and reach around and grab his dick…"

Her: "You got the wrong woman. I love to flirt, but I would never go that far! You have to be my man for me to grab your stuff…"

Me: "Okay. Well, at least, go and dance with my buddy. It's his birthday weekend. Help him have a great time tonight…"

Moments later, Debra goes out on the dance floor, and does actually start dancing behind Bruce, while Bruce is dancing with Amber. I could see Amber give Debra a look like, "Who in the hell are you??" but she didn't say anything to Debra. Bruce looked at me from the dance floor as if to say, "is this another prospect?" I just smirked and nodded my head.

I returned to engaging Tracey in conversation, but a few minutes later, Bruce, Amber, and Debra came back to the bar area after the last song ended.

Me: "Amber … this is Debra. Debra, this is Amber."

They both gave each other a very phony "glad to meet you." They were anything but glad to meet each other. I gave Amber the $25 that Tiffany gave me, but Amber was pissed that Tiffany left her there with no ride. Soon, she starting hinting to us that she wanted Bruce and I to give her a ride home.

Amber starts whispering something in Bruce's ear, and he is smirking. I later found out that she essentially told Bruce that if he took her home, she was going to give him some pussy.

Debra would not give up though. She literally just pulled Bruce back on the dance floor and started dancing with him, leaving me with Tracey and Amber. I could see Amber was irritated, but she wasn't going to say anything in front of Tracey. I excused myself from Tracey so I could speak with Amber.

Me: “Why do you look irritated…”

Her: “Are these the two women that Bruce was supposed to have a threesome with tonight?”

Me (chuckles): “Oh, no … no, no, no. I just met these two women tonight in this club. The one dancing with Bruce right now let me know that she is really, really attracted to him…”

Her: “Well, I thought it was rude of her to just come out on the floor with us while Bruce and I were dancing. Very rude…”

I realized now that I had to initiate some “damage control.” I thought I had Amber as a secure prospect for my man Bruce, but now she was obviously agitated. I was the one who encouraged Debra to go and join them dancing, so it was really my fault that Amber was now uncomfortable with the vibe.

Me: “When Bruce comes back, I’ll have a talk with the young lady…”

Her: “Okay.”

I go back to conversing with Tracey (I was being very X-rated with Tracey, and she just kept saying, “You are nasty! You are so nasty!! How did you become so nasty Alan??”). About two or three songs later, Bruce and Debra came back to the bar area. You could now sense that Bruce and Debra had established some good personality chemistry between them.

I gestured for Bruce to talk to me one-on-one. We walked away from the young ladies.

Bruce: “Bro, I am split. I know for a fact that I can fuck Amber tonight. She’s all over me. I know I can fuck her. This other honey though? Debra? She’s not game for fucking tonight, but she wants us to go out sometime in the next week or two…”

Me: “Then the decision is made. Go after Amber.”

Bruce: "Well, yes … and no. I don't want to blow off Debra, because she already has the impression that I prefer white women over black women. You know damn well Al … I just love women. I could give a fuck about race"

Me: "Give Debra your number, and tell her you will call her next week. Then, concentrate on Amber."

Bruce (hesitant): "Okay. We'll see."

Bruce and I walk back toward the bar, and you could tell it was uncomfortable between Amber and Debra. Debra and Tracey were talking, and Amber was just sort of standing there by herself. I actually felt bad for Amber, given that her roommate just left her stranded there with no transportation.

Just before Bruce was about to start conversing with Amber again, I gave him a gesture that said "hold up a minute." I then told both Amber and Debra that I wanted to talk to them. They reluctantly agreed, although I could tell neither woman wanted to talk to me with the other woman around.

Me (to both women): "I don't know how to be anything but candid, real, and straight-to-the-point, so here is the deal. (looking at Amber) You want Bruce to fuck you …. don't you…"

Because Debra was in the conversation, Amber hesitated. I was relentless though.

Me: "Am I lying or what? Am I talking to myself or what? Either you want Bruce to fuck you … or you don't."

Amber: "Where is this (conversation) going?"

Me: "Just let me do what I do best: Handle shit."

Debra: "Why do I need to know about her desire to have sex with Bruce? I don't give a fuck about her desires."

Me (to Debra): "Why are you still hanging around at the bar? I know why. Because you want Bruce to fuck you too…"

Debra: “I don’t just fuck men the first day I meet them like SOME women (hinting at Amber). I am a lady .. not a ho.”

Amber: “This conversation has just gotten real stupid. I don’t see the point of it…”

Me (to Debra): “Amber wants to fuck Bruce tonight, and Bruce wants to fuck Amber tonight. That is a fact. (pauses to look at Amber; I waited a second to see if she was going to challenge or dispute what I said; she just pretends like she is looking away and distracted) So what is your story Debra? Do you want Bruce to fuck you tonight or not?”

Debra: “Excuse me?!?”

Me: “You’re excused. (Debra and I exchange long stares)”

Debra: “Who I fuck and when I fuck them is none of your damn business Alan. That is none of your damn business.”

Me: “I would beg to differ. You see, Bruce is a friend of mine. A very close friend. This is Bruce’s birthday weekend, and the only reason Bruce is even in this club is because a threesome he was supposed to have didn’t happen. Right now, Bruce should be getting his dick sucked by not only one woman, but TWO women….”

Both Amber and Debra display a variety of facial expressions, but they don’t say anything.

Me: “So here is the deal. Debra, why don’t you exchange phone numbers with Bruce, but then, let him have fun with Amber for tonight. You can get some dick from Bruce next week, or the week after….”

Debra: “Excuse me?!?!?”

Me: “Once again …. You’re excused.” (we exchange stares/glares into each other’s eyes once again)

Debra: "I didn't come out tonight 'looking for sex.' She (pointing at Amber) may have, but that is not how I roll."

Me: "Then why are you here right now? Tell me. Why did you and Tracey come to this particular club. To get some drinks? You could go to the liquor store for that. To get some attention on your looks and clothing? You could go to the beach tomorrow afternoon and do that. Have good conversation? You could do that with anyone, anytime. So … why are you here … at this nightclub … right now, tonight?"

Debra: "Me and Tracey just like having fun, and this is a nice little spot. I like it here. They always play good dance music, and Tracey and I love to dance…"

Me: "Then take Tracey on the dance floor and dance. (pause) Again, it's like this: I want Bruce to have a good time tonight. Amber has already guaranteed Bruce that he is going to have a good time with her if he goes back to her place, or she comes over his place. (pause) I don't want any unnecessary 'drama' to ruin my buddy's night. So either you admit to me that you want him to fuck you tonight too, or exchange numbers and leave it alone for tonight…"

Debra (agitated): "Who put you in charge?"

I don't even respond to Debra's question. Amber and Debra both look at me like they don't know what to say next. Bruce is looking at me from afar with an expression of "What is going on over there?" I look back at Bruce like "one moment. I got this. Let me handle this."

I lean into Amber, and I whisper in her ear.

Me (whispering): "You want Bruce to fuck you … don't you …"

Amber (soft whisper): "Yes…."

Me: "Say it…"

Amber leans into me, and whispers in my ear

Her: "I want your friend Bruce to fuck me…"

Me: "Oooooh … say it again …."

Her: "I want your friend Bruce to fuck me…."

Now, I turn my attention to Debra. I lean into her in order to whisper in her ear. She is not nearly as receptive as Amber. Debra actually takes a step back and moves away from me initially, but minutes later she relaxes, and remains still.

Me (whispering to Debra): "Listen … I am not trying to piss you off Debra. I like you. I really like your friend Tracey, and I want to hook up with her in the near future. I think you are both quality sistahs. But if it was Tracey's birthday, wouldn't you look out for her? Wouldn't you want her to have a great time on her birthday weekend?"

Debra nods her head, as if to say, "yes, I would."

Debra: "No…."

Debra: "Yes…"

Me (whispering): "Now, if you want to give Bruce some pussy tonight … I am all for you sticking around, and making your presence felt. But if you don't want to fuck him until a few days or a few weeks from now, go ahead and let Amber have this night…. (pause) Cool? Is that cool with you Debra?"

Debra hesitates. She does not respond immediately.

Me (whispering): “The truth is, you want Bruce to fuck you tonight too, don’t you….”

Debra: “I don’t feel comfortable telling you that…”

Me (whispering): “Then why am I in your space? Why are you allowing me to stand this close to you, and talk to you in your ear? Trust me … you’re comfortable with me talking to you. No doubt. I keep it real. Just keep it real with me Debra…”

Debra: “I am not a ho…. don’t treat me like I’m a ho…”

Me (whispering): “Did I say you were a ho? Have I ever called you a ho or a slut tonight? Be real …”

Debra: “No, but you know how you men are….”

Me (whispering): “You’re generalizing Debra. Don’t group me in with other men. A whore is a woman who trades sexual companionship for money and financial favors. Is that what you do with men?”

Debra: “Hell no. I have sex with men because I am attracted to them, and because I want to. Money is not an issue. I make enough of my own money. I can take care of myself financially without any assistance from a man…”

Me (whispering): “Okay, great. Sounds like you’re clockin’ some dollars. That’s cool. Now, say for me, ‘I enjoy being fucked’…”

Debra (amused): “I am not saying that…. (lightens up a bit) you are a trip Alan. You don’t mince words at all, do you…”

Me (whispering): “Should I? I don’t believe in mincing words. Upfront and straightforward is how I express myself. (pause) Now c’mon Debra, say it. Say, ‘I love to be fucked’…”

Debra: “I’ll say this: I love sex. I will say that. And that is all I am saying. (giggles) Shouldn’t you be having this conversation with my friend Tracey?”

I reach my left arm out and pull Amber into the conversation that is going on between Debra and I.

Me (to Debra): “Now Debra … I want you to apologize to Amber …”

Debra (cutting me off): “Apologize? Apologize for what?”

Me (calm voice): “For interrupting her dance. Amber was getting her groove on with Bruce, and you interrupted them…”

Debra (lighthearted anger): “But it was YOU who told me to go out there ….”

I abruptly cut off Debra.

Me: “Eh … eh …. No excuses needed. Just say, ‘Amber, I am sorry for interrupting you while you were dancing with Bruce. I would not have wanted you to do that to me…”

Debra (reluctant): “Okay, okay …. I’ll be nice. (to Amber) Amber, I am sorry for cutting into your dance. I normally don’t do that because I would feel it would be disrespectful if another woman did that to me. Please accept my apologies…”

Me (to Amber): “Now, say ‘Thank you Debra for your apology’… “

Amber: “Thank you Debra for your apology. I appreciate it”

Me (to Amber and Debra): “Now was that hard?”

Both women slowly, but surely exchange smiles. I give Bruce a “I’m just about done” expression and gesture. In the meantime, Bruce and Tracey are engaged in conversation.

Me (to Amber): “Amber … tell Debra how much you want Bruce to fuck you tonight…”

Amber gives me a “I don’t believe you just asked me to say that” expression, but I don’t back down from my request.

Me (to Amber): “Don’t be bashful. Say it.”

Amber hesitates, but then she says it.

Amber (to Debra): “I am very attracted to Alan’s friend Bruce, and I very much want him to fuck me tonight…”

Me (to Amber): “Now say, ‘Debra, if you don’t mind … can I please fuck him tonight? I promise to share the dick with you if you want me to…”

Debra: “Alan, you are trippin. I mean, really, really trippin.”

Me (to Debra): “Yes … (looking at her directly in her eyes) … but you are still standing here. That is all that matters. (pause) Now, as I was saying…”

I lightly spank Amber on her ass and tell her to say what I told her to say.

Amber (to Debra): “I want Bruce to fuck me …. and I want to … (hesitates a bit) … I want to share …. (looks at me with a “do you REALLY want me to continue?” look)”

Me (whispering in Amber’s ear): “Say it …”

Amber (to Debra): “I want Bruce to fuck me …(pause) … and I want him to fuck you too…. if that’s what you want…”

I won’t lie. My dick got hard when she said that the way she did. I didn’t’ expect her to say it quite like that.

Me: “Ooooooh …. Say that again …. But this time, whisper it in Debra’s ear”

Amber carefully and hesitantly moves closer to Debra so she can whisper it to her. I expected Debra to possibly move away, but she doesn’t. Debra remains still and allows Amber to enter into her space.

Amber (whispering to Debra): “Debra …. I want Bruce to fuck me tonight … and I want to watch him fuck you too…”

Right now, I was tempted to say, “Fuck Bruce … I want to fuck both of you two myself!!” But Bruce was my good friend, and my status for the evening was simply to be his ‘wingman.’

To my surprise, Amber started lightly touching Debra on her arm as she whispered in her ear, and even more surprising, Debra did not move back or move away. She just stood there. So, recognizing that these two women had developing chemistry, I decided to escalate things a tad bit.

Me (to Debra): “Your turn Debra. Now say to Amber, ‘I want some of that dick too Amber … can you please share that dick with me tonight…”

Debra did not say it immediately. She just gave me this look that was half-seductive, and half-“I don’t’ believe I’m showing you this side of me” expression. Debra then smiled at me.

Debra (to me): “Alan … you have devil horns growing out of your head …. you know that don’t you...”

I just smirked.

Me (to Debra): “Now say what I told you to say…”

Debra (to Amber): “Amber … (pause) … I really, really want Bruce to fuck me tonight too … are you willing to share his dick with me … please…”

Initially, I just wanted to hook Bruce up with ONE woman from the nightclub, but now, I have Amber and Debra talking about sharing and fucking Bruce TONIGHT. In my mind, I was like “Hot damn. Looks like Bruce may be having a threesome tonight after all!” This represents the awesome power of Mode One erotic, upfront, straightforward honesty.

Me (to Amber): “Say ‘Yes Debra … I want to watch Bruce fuck you tonight’…”

Amber (to Debra): "Debra … I want to watch Bruce fuck you tonight …. And then I want him to fuck me just as good as he will probably fuck you…."

Me (to both women): "Now go over to Bruce, and whisper in his ear that you both want him to fuck you tonight…"

Amber and Debra both nod their heads affirmatively, and then head over to Bruce. Moments later, I see both Amber and Debra whispering in Bruce's right ear and left ear. Bruce gives me a look that says, "Al, you are the fuckin' man!!!" A few seconds later, Debra's friend Tracey comes over to me.

Tracey: "I thought you had forgot about me…"

Me: "No. Not at all. I just had to straighten some shit out."

Tracey: "Were you over here corrupting my friend Debra?"

Me: "Me? With this innocent face? Nah. Just being me."

Tracey: "Innocent face my ass. You are so nasty Alan…."

All five of us woke up the next morning with a smile on our faces. Tracey and I continued to exchange orgasms for the next few months.

Quick lessons to take away from this experience of mine:

- Anytime you want to put some sexual thoughts in a woman's head, but you are a wee bit hesitant to do it yourself, get a male or female friend of yours to become a wingman or a wingwoman for you. If you are somewhat of a "novice" at approaching women, initiating a conversation with them, and talking dirty to them, having a wingman or wingwoman to do those things for you is invaluable to your success with women. Remember: If a wingman (or wingwoman) "hypes" you up as far as your sexual prowess and your ability to please and satisfy a woman in bed, be prepared to deliver. Otherwise, the women you have (disappointing) sex with will talk about you negatively behind your back for days, weeks, and months.

- Based on the random survey I conducted, I found that no less than 35% of all single women surveyed said they would be willing to engage in some form of "really kinky sex act" (such as a threesome, or spontaneous sex in public) with a man who they just met or really didn't' know that well. Many women actually said they feel more comfortable engaging in "really kinky" sex acts with strangers or new acquaintances than they do with men who they have been involved in a long-term relationship with. Remember: Always practice safe sex.

- When you are conversing with women in a provocative manner using erotically explicit language, you should almost expect women to initially be 'thrown off' by it, and for them to possibly have somewhat of an adverse response to it. That said, never apologize or back down from anything you ask a woman or say to a woman. Never, ever do that. If you apologize or back down, it makes you look weak … like you have no real balls or backbone. Stand by everything you ask a woman, and every desire, interest or intention you express to a woman, no matter how provocative or explicit your language may be. It's all about balls and backbone.

Wrap Up & Final Thoughts

There is a popular saying that goes, “it is what it is.”

Many women (and men) try to directly associate the desire for sex with feelings of romantic love. This is a major mistake. I can have intercourse with a woman 100+ times, and never feel like I am “in love” with a woman. Based on my conversations with many men, there are more men in society who are share my attitude than those who do not.

Sex is what it is. The act of sex is neither ‘good’ or ‘bad.’ The act of sex is neither ‘advantageous’ or ‘detrimental.’ The act of sex is neither ‘memorable’ or ‘regrettable.’ It is the specific people involved in the act of sex that will ultimately determine if both parties smile later or frown later when reminiscing about their intimate activities from the past.

Some women have accused me of encouraging men to pursue casual sex instead of long-term monogamous sexual relationships or marriage. I have never done that and I never will. I just want both men and women to be more genuine, upfront and straightforwardly honest about their true sexual desires, interests and intentions with each other.

You hear many in society harshly criticizing prostitutes, Call Girls, Erotic Escorts, and adult film actors and actresses, but the reality is, these types are more real about their sexuality than just about anyone else in mainstream society.

The subject of sex is hands down the #1 subject that most men want to discuss with women quickly, honestly, and straightforwardly, but are afraid to. Surveys have frequently shown that the top two things men and women are most afraid to discuss with others in a very candid manner is 1) anything to do with their sex life, and 2) anything to do with their personal finances. I always say: there is a difference between being private and discreet, and being phony and duplicitous.

If you are a parent of a son or daughter, talk to your children about making responsible sex choices. Do you know, more pre-teens and teenagers learn about sex from their peers than they do from their parents and elders? That is a damn shame. Good, high quality, effective sex education is crucial to the development of pre-teens, teenagers and young adults.

I hear parents say all the time, "All you see on television and in movies is sex, sex, and sex. That is what is wrong in this country!!" That is bullshit. I have watched many television shows and feature-films that featured gun violence, yet, I have never shot anyone nor have I ever been shot by anyone (knock on wood). Just because you are exposed to fictional characters exhibiting a certain form of behavior does not necessarily mean you will go out and emulate that behavior.

You know what men do when they have no confidence or verbal seduction skills? They either try to get women drunk, or they sneak and put date-rape drugs in women's drinks, and then take advantage of them. What mother or father would want their daughter being taken advantage of like that?

In my dream world, I wish all men had the green light from society to just walk up to women of interest anytime and anywhere, and say something along the lines of, "You want to hook up and fuck sometime?" and then have the women say either "yes, I would love that!" or "no, I would not be interested." Either, or. That would be great. Upfront and straightforward.

Until that day comes, most men and women will continue to engage in all of these disingenuous, duplicitous, misleading and manipulative 'head games' with one another. And I have decided that my #1 purpose on this earth is to help people quickly and effectively identify these various bullshit head games every opportunity I get. My mission continues . . .
